

PRESIDENT WILSON DISCUSSES REPUBLICAN PLATFORM AND POLICIES FOR THE POST-DISPATCH

HOOVER INDORSES G. O. P. ACTION AND ASKS VOTERS TO SUPPORT TICKET

Declares in Statement That Greater Part of Platform Is Constructive and Progressive Although Some Things Were "Inadequately Dealt With."

NO GROUP WILL RULE HARDING, HE SAYS

Believes Complex Political Organization Means Disaster and Would Discourage Breaking Away From Two Old Parties.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 18.—Indorsing in the main the action of the Republican national convention at Chicago, Herbert Hoover in a letter to friends, made public today, after he had conferred with Senator Harding, the Republican presidential nominee, called upon all elements to the party to support the national ticket at the polls.

Hoover declared that the greater part of the Chicago platform is constructive and progressive and that "nothing prevents the compromise planks on labor, the league, etc., from being given a forward-looking interpretation." He added, however, that "some things, including a reorganization of our election expenditures and the primaries, are not adequately dealt with."

"Nothing could be more disastrous," he continued, "than the development of several party organizations representing the complexion of every group in the country. If we should come to this position, we shall be entirely ruled by log-rolling minorities or sterile political coalitions."

The former Food Administrator declared that it was the duty of those Republicans who held "more definite views" to endeavor to bring them to realization within the party organization itself as the issues on which they bear arise.

"Group Domination Unlikely."
"If the Republican party is not to be irreparably split," declared Hoover, "I cannot conceive that Senator Harding will for one moment submit the administrative side of the Government to the domination of any group or clique."

Hoover in this connection said the Senator had stated to him that "the views of both the conservative and progressive wings of the party would be fully represented in the administration and that he represented no particular group."

"I breakfasted with Senator Harding this morning at the Senator's invitation," said Hoover's statement. "I presented the views which I believe were held by a considerable group of independent and progressive Republicans on various questions. The Senator stated that it was his most sincere desire to be the instrumentality for bringing the divergent elements of the party together; that the views of both the conservative and progressive wings of the party would be fully represented in the administration; that he represented no particular group, but that he considered it was his first duty as leader of the party to consolidate all elements into a united front. He will, of course, issue no statement until after the Democratic convention, and then after consultation with all sides."

Hoover's Letter to Friends.
"My own position on various issues is well enough known, and as to the party situation, I cannot make it more clear than the following letter which I sent to friends in different parts of the country two days ago, and before I had any communication with Senator Harding."

"I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter. I have received many hundred other communications from friends advising various courses with respect to the situation that eventuated in Chicago, for undoubtedly many of the independent and progressive Republicans like myself are greatly disappointed over some tendencies that were apparent at Chicago. The Chicago platform is not radical; the

DETROIT AND CLEVELAND PASS ST. LOUIS IN POPULATION

Michigan City's Population Is 993,739, Gain of 113.4 Per Cent, and Ohio Metropolis Has 796,834, Increase of 42 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, June 18.—The Census Bureau today announced 1920 populations of Detroit and Cleveland, as follows:
Detroit, 993,739, increase 527,973, or 113.4 per cent.
Cleveland, 796,834, increase 236,173, or 42.1 per cent.

Detroit, with a numerical increase and rate of growth larger than Chicago's, and second only to New York's during the last 10 years, is now fourth largest city of the country, displacing St. Louis, and outranking Boston, Cleveland, Baltimore and Pittsburgh, all of which were larger than the Michigan city 10 years ago.

Cleveland's area is 56.6 square miles and Detroit's 79.52 square miles.
The 1920 official population of St. Louis, announced April 13, is 773,000. This was an increase of $5,971, or 12.5 per cent, over the 1910 figure, which was 687,029.

Detroit's Gain a Record One.
Detroit is the only city of 100,000 or more which has more than doubled its population in the last 10 years.

Cleveland, also with a large increase, has outstripped St. Louis and Boston and takes rank as fifth largest city of the United States. The Ohio city had the fifth largest numerical increase of any municipality in the country during the last 10 years, its increase having been exceeded only by New York, Chicago, Detroit and Los Angeles. Cleveland's population exceeds that of St. Louis by 23,000 and that of Boston by almost 50,000.

With announcement of the populations of Cleveland and Detroit, the definite ranking of the country's 18 largest cities has been established. New York and Chicago will remain first and second largest cities, respectively. Philadelphia is the only one of the 18 whose 1920 population has not been announced, but it is not likely that the Pennsylvania city's rank as third largest in the country will be changed. Detroit's jump into fourth place and Cleveland's into fifth position forces St. Louis into sixth, Boston into seventh, Baltimore into eighth and Pittsburgh into ninth places.

Ranking of Other Cities.
Los Angeles, with the largest rate of growth, advanced from seventeenth to tenth and displaced Buffalo, as well as attaining the honor of being the largest city west of St. Louis. San Francisco retained eleventh rank and Buffalo dropped from tenth to twelfth, while Milwaukee was forced into thirteenth place.

Washington, D. C., moved from sixteenth to fourteenth position, displacing Newark, N. J., which dropped into fifteenth position. Cincinnati, thirteenth largest city in 1910, now ranks as sixteenth.
New Orleans, through the advance of Los Angeles and Washington, was forced from fifteenth rank to seventeenth position, while Minneapolis retained its rank as eighteenth largest city.

The ranking of the cities below Minneapolis cannot be determined until the populations of Kansas City, Mo.; Providence, R. I.; and Rochester, N. Y., have been announced.
Boston, which was fifth in 1910, and which was feared this year, was shown to be still behind St. Louis. Its population, announced June 5, is 747,923, placing Boston farther behind St. Louis than in 1910.

Detroit and Cleveland remained to be heard from. Detroit was ninth among American cities in 1910, with 465,766, and Cleveland was sixth, with 560,663.

A Detroit suburb, Hamtramck, scored the highest increase in population announced this year, its increase being from 3559 to 48,615, or 1266 per cent.

GEO. W. PERKINS, FINANCIER, DIES IN SANITARIUM

Affection Causing Death Believed to Have Been Result of Influenza and Pneumonia Contracted in France.

AMONG FIRST TO URGE PROFIT-SHARING

Started in Insurance Business, Was in Morgan Firm Ten Years, Then Retired to Do Work of Public Nature.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, June 18.—George W. Perkins, financier, died this morning in the Stamford Hall Sanitarium, Stamford, Conn.

It became known June 11 that Perkins had suffered a nervous breakdown, but members of his family did not intimate at that time that his life was in danger.
Perkins was taken to Stamford about 10 days ago, when his son, George W. Perkins Jr., announced the change was made to afford his father a complete rest and seclusion from his friends who sought his counsel during the political campaign preceding the Chicago convention.

The affection to which Perkins succumbed is believed to have been the result of influenza and pneumonia, contracted while serving with the Y. M. C. A. in France during the war.

A statement by the financier's physicians given out at Perkins' office gave the time of his death as 2:15 this morning. Death resulted from an attack of "acute inflammation of the brain, the result of complete nervous exhaustion due to intense and continuous overwork," the announcement said.

The death of Perkins was particularly unexpected, it was said at his office, on account of his having recently survived a very serious heart attack, after which his family and friends believed his constitution sufficiently robust to throw off the malady.

While details of the funeral have not been announced, it was said it would take place Sunday afternoon at the Riverside Presbyterian Church in the Bronx. The service will be private, it was said. The body was taken to his country home at Riverdale today.

Perkins Among First to Propose Profit-Sharing to Big Business.
George Walbridge Perkins, or G. W. Perkins, of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., was reputed to have first suggested to and persuaded a "big business" to adopt profit-sharing insurance service for its employees, benefits and old-age pensions.

It was Perkins who was also said to have inaugurated the plan which permitted employees of the United States Steel Corporation and the International Harvester Co. in both of which he was at one time an executive, to purchase stock on installment and at less than market value on the assumption that "industrial justice is the basis of all progress."

Perkins was born in Chicago, Jan. 31, 1862, a descendant of Jacob Perkins, an English ancestor who settled in Boston in 1631. His father, George W. Perkins, long engaged in the shipping industry at Buffalo, later a pioneer in the life insurance field. The son entered the insurance business in Chicago when 15 as a clerk, became a bookkeeper, an agent and finally a manager of a Cleveland office. He was invited to join the New York Life Insurance Co. His achievements attracted the attention of the elder Morgan and in 1900 he was invited to become a member of the Wall Street firm. In this capacity he negotiated a number of big foreign loans. He remained with J. P. Morgan & Co. until 1910, meanwhile becoming a director of numerous large corporations including the steel and harvesting companies, a number of railroads and International Mercantile Marine Co.

Was Progressive Chairman.
Retiring from business a few years later, he said, "to devote myself to other work of a public and semi-public nature." Perkins wrote and spoke frequently on the subject of industrial justice, and when Col. Roosevelt became Progressive candidate for the presidency in 1912 he was Progressive Chairman.

Correspondent's Description of President Today; Mr. Wilson's Own View of His Condition

FROM Louis Seibold's account of his three-hour visit with the President at the White House:

The man studied at a distance of six feet on the rear porch of the White House on Tuesday did not appear to have changed greatly in facial characteristics since the last meeting with him eight months before. But there was a change. To assert that his face did not bear the marks of illness and suffering would be not only disingenuous, but wholly incorrect.

It was the face of a man who had suffered greatly, but who had endured it with stoicism born of fine courage. It was the same angular face, quite as full in cheek and not the least shrunken at the temples. It was the same face registered in a mental picture eight months before. Yet the marks of illness and confinement were unmistakably there, even as the healthy color surging through the drawn gray skin could not entirely dispel.

President's remark when his attention was called by the correspondent to charges made during debates in the Senate:
"You must remember we have a political campaign on. All kinds of criticisms and charges fill the air; investigations are the rule. The purpose of them is easy to understand when you recall the fact that there is a political campaign in front of us. You would think, sometimes, we were bewailing a defeat instead of celebrating a victory."

PRESIDENT'S remark to correspondent when felicitated on his recovery:
"I am coming around in good shape and could do a lot more things now if Mrs. Wilson and Dr. Grayson would kindly look the other way once in a while. I suppose that such tender vigilance is justified, but I can tell you now that I have been doing more amid this tranquil setting than I used to do when I spent my days in the office receiving all sorts of people on all sorts of errands."

"I have more time for deliberation and can concentrate with better advantage on the matters which come to me. This morning I was at my desk in my study at 9 o'clock going over matters that needed attention. I affixed my signature to a great many commissions, which is one of the penalties of being President. This afternoon I have a Cabinet meeting in my study, and then later on I may go for a motor ride. I get some exercise that is helpful to me, but it is not as much as I should like, nor as much as I am going to indulge in later on."

GRAND JURY TO TAKE UP MARTIN TRUCK CO. AFFAIRS

Circuit Attorney Also to Try to Find Fugitive Head of Concern to Answer Manslaughter Indictment.

Circuit Attorney McDaniel said today that he would make an investigation of the measures taken by Arthur Raymond, known in St. Louis for the last two and one-half years as Frank A. Martin, president of the Martin Motor Truck Co., 2300 Pine street, to borrow $200,000 in six weeks prior to his disappearance from the city last June 6.

The Circuit Attorney also said that he desired the return to St. Louis of Raymond for prosecution under an indictment of April 4, 1913, charging manslaughter. As told in late editions of yesterday's Post-Dispatch, Raymond was driver of a taxicab occupied by Arthur G. Godair, a wealthy livestock dealer, which was struck by an Olive-Maryland street car at Boyle and McPherson avenues on March 20, 1913. Godair was thrown out and killed.

Raymond fled from St. Louis at that time. Returning in 1917, he assumed the name of "Frank A. Martin," becoming a large distributor of motor trucks, owner of a home in Clayton and later treasurer of the Missouri Motorbus Co., which operates motor buses between Sixth and Locust streets and Delmar boulevard and Hamilton avenue.

It was stated in the Circuit Attorney's office that no inquiry had been made into Raymond's transactions, but from statements made to reporters it appeared that "Martin" had rehypothecated mortgaged trucks. If this is correct, it was stated, the probable charge against him would be obtaining money on false pretenses.

Maj. E. M. Lubbeck, a representative of the Diamond T. Motor Truck Co. of Chicago, who has taken charge of the Martin Motor Truck Co. at the request of creditors, stated to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that approximately $50,000 of the $200,000 borrowed by "Martin" was upon paper that since has been found to be spurious. Maj. Lubbeck today explained the methods employed by "Martin" in obtaining the money.

Get Double Loans.
"It is the custom of truck manufacturers," Maj. Lubbeck said, "upon shipment of a truck to any of its agents, to mail the original bill of lading for the truck to the agent and a duplicate bill of lading, with a sight draft for the price of the truck attached to his bank. Thus, it was necessary for the agent to pay the sight draft before he could unload the truck. 'Martin' was the agent of the Diamond T. Truck in St. Louis. The practice of the company in dealing with 'Martin' was no different

VEILED REJECTION OF LEAGUE BY G. O. P. WON'T FOOL ANYONE, HE SAYS

Declares People Will Detect Evasion of Big Issues in Document Adopted at Chicago.

HOPES DEMOCRATS WILL TAKE PROGRESSIVE STAND

Executive Asserts Direct Antithesis to "Reactionary, Ambiguous and Camouflaged" Republican Platform Would Be Most Acceptable From San Francisco.

(The Post-Dispatch herewith presents, with President Wilson's full approval, the following interview which Louis Seibold, a staff correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World, had with him at the White House this week.)

By Louis Seibold.
Copyright, 1920, by the Press Pub. Co. (New York World).

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The President, much interested in the extraordinary results of the Republican convention at Chicago, asked a great many questions concerning the organization, the dominant figures and the controlling influences that dictated the platform and engineered the nomination of Mr. Harding. He seemed to take an almost boyish delight in the sketchy description that I was able to give him. Regarding the nominees, the President declined to make any comment beyond expressing the belief that the gentlemen selected for President and Vice President at Chicago "admirably harmonized with the platform."

"I suppose I should feel flattered," he said, with a twinkle in his eyes, "over being made the issue of the presidential campaign by the Republican party. But even the effort of the platform makers at Chicago to confer the distinction of being not only a burning but a living issue by camouflaging and obscuring the real issues will not deceive the people."

"The processes by which the Chicago platform was accomplished seemed to me to have been essentially and scientifically Prussian in inspiration and method. Instead of quoting Washington and Lincoln, the Republican platform should have quoted Bismarck and Bernhardi, because the Republican attitude regarding the supreme issue that cannot be abandoned or disregarded strongly suggests the arbitrary influences that dictated the doctrines of those two eminent persons."

"Every change directed against me and my administration is obviously designed to hoodwink and negative the paramount issues confronting the people of America, to befog their sense of responsibility and make violation of the obligations they have assumed to be of small consequence. I sincerely believe that the attempt of the Republican party to win the sanction of the American people for its attempted evasion of these obligations will be decisively rebuffed. With one thing I am fully satisfied; this is that the Republican party in its platform has joined me in the suggestion I made in my letter to the guests at the Jackson-Hay dinner in Washington in January last. In that letter I expressed the hope that a sincere attempt would be made to determine the attitude of the American people on the League of Nations by the resort to the genuinely democratic process of referendum."

No Forecast of Sentiment.
"Of course, I have no way of anticipating the probable trend of sentiment that will be expressed in the Democratic National convention at San Francisco or forecasting the ultimate conclusions of that body. But I have every confidence that the delegates who will sit in that convention will represent the challenge I issued to the Republican party and express their readiness to permit the people to decide between the vague and ambitious declaration by the Republicans, and a positive and definite expression of opinion by the Democratic party. Whatever the Democratic party may do I hope that its convention at San Francisco will say just what it means on every issue, and that it will not resort either to ambiguity or evasions in doing so. "I should prefer at this time not to discuss partisan politics or to venture any prediction as to the probable attitude that the Democratic convention will take on any subject. I sincerely believe, however, that the vast majority of gentlemen who will sit in the San Francisco convention will appreciate the necessity and permanent value of keeping the word that America has given to the rest of the world."

"This thing (the League of Nations) which I would like to permit of any political audacity, any attempt to evade moral and humanitarian responsibilities, much too solemn to treat so lightly or ignore."

"The thinly veiled rejection of the principle of the League of Nations by the Chicago convention will not fool anyone. The attitude of Senator Lodge and that of Senator Johnson differ only in degree. Both are really opposed to it in any form. One of these gentlemen is disingenuous and evasive and the other candidly hostile."

"In common with other recognized spokesmen for the Republican party they accord me too much credit for the conception of the League of Nations project. While I am glad to assume the responsibility for the part I have played in promoting it, the honor of discovering its merits and appreciating its values cannot justly be given to me."

McKinley Advocated League.
"The last son of Ohio to become President of the United States advocated a League of Nations more than 15 years before I became impressed with its tremendous importance and seized upon it as providing the greatest insurance ever devised against war. I mean William McKinley. Senator Theodore Burton, another Ohio Republican possessing rare powers of perception, was an ardent champion of it. Senator Lodge was so favorably impressed with the value of a League of Nations as providing adequate safeguards against war that he openly championed it in an address before Union military."

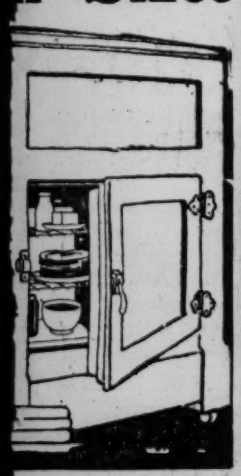

"So it must be a trifling disconcert to some Republicans to have their party propose now to repudiate that which was approved a few years ago by some of their most important leaders. I am confident today as I was when I returned from Paris finally in July last that the people of not only America, but of the entire world, are in favor of the League of Nations."

tion; that they would feel a greater sense of security if its benefits were guaranteed; that they would not approve of the policy of the policy of the Republican party which is wholly political in intent and purpose and that they would protect the protection that the League of Nations assures.

"I am extremely confident that the Democratic convention at San Francisco will welcome the acceptance by the Republican party of my invitation to make the League of Nations the issue of the campaign. I am even more confident that such a referendum will confirm my faith that the American people desire it above anything that a political party may now provide, and that they will condemn the Republican policy of denying them the consummation of their hopes. No person will welcome a referendum on that issue more than I."

Chuckles at Republican Stand.
The President appeared to take it as a matter of course that the Republican party would be the one to condemn the policy of his administration. He chuckled while discussing some of the features of the platform adopted by the Republican convention at Chicago.

"The Republican congressional policy was more significant for evasion of joint responsibility in grappling with the problems that confront the country than for any moral appreciation of the responsibility itself. Republican leaders in Congress cried for the repeal of some of the measures which they well knew protected the people from more serious evils than they would have the country know."

"The Lever food control act has proved to be one of the most effective agencies in preventing hoarding at the expense of the people than almost any other measure now in operation. Time for repealing it is not yet."

"Republicans chorused a pompous note of protest against the administration and enforcement of the espionage act and some other measures that were of vital necessity during the war. Yet I defy the Republicans to prove that the power given the Government during the war has ever been unjustly used against the people; that a single citizen has been unwarrantably punished for any act of aggression or crime against the nation; that any man has been punished for expressing his opinion. I have read charges to the contrary, but in each instance I have had the matter thoroughly looked into and in no instance to contest the accuracy of any statement that the rights of a single citizen have been unjustly invaded."

Had Power to End Unrest.
The United States Senate has for 11 months had in its hands the power to end conditions that are unmistakably irksome to a great many of our citizens because of the ratification of the peace treaty the operation of laws that were enacted to safeguard the interests of the country in the war would automatically cease.

"As long as these laws are on the statute books they must be enforced. They have been and are being enforced, with as little injury to the welfare of the country and rights of individuals as possible. I don't know that I would even care to defend any policy that I have deemed essential to the fullest protection of the nation. That would be too much like offering an apology where one is not needed. I do not believe that my course calls for an apology of any kind."

"The Republican and not the Democratic policy has been responsible for any bad effects that have resulted from the failure of the Versailles treaty and the covenant of the League of Nations. The Republican policy of negotiation has been persisted in for the sole purpose of advancing Republican chances for winning the coming presidential election and has never reflected a sincere desire to ameliorate the effects of measures adopted for protecting the country in time of war. The Republican policy has been rather to exaggerate the effect of these measures."

Root's Status Not Clear.
The President replied that he did not possess any definite idea as to Mr. Root's status or through what agency the invitation had been extended to him to lend the result of his long experience and diplomacy to the construction of the League of Nations world court plan. I gathered from what the President said in this connection that neither Mr. Root nor any other man had been designated officially to represent the United States in connection with the work of setting up the machinery for the world court.

I asked the President if he had formed any opinion regarding the type of man that the Democratic party should propose for President.

"Now, Selbold," he said, with admonishing gesture of his right hand, "I told you that we would discuss candidates and those nominated by the Republicans at Chicago the other day. I have the greatest faith in the intelligent appreciation by the delegates who will assemble at San Francisco two weeks hence to write the platform and nominate the standard-bearers of our party. They will have before them the Republican platform, and will have estimated the effect of it on the people generally. They will have from whom to select candidates for the presidential and vice-presidential nominations a number of excellent men. I should not want to express any preference or opinion regarding either individuals or platform expressions, which might influence the minds of the men whose votes will ultimately decide both."

"I hope and believe that the platform to be adopted at San Francisco will be more progressive and clearer in understanding than that enunciated by the Republicans at Chicago. The character of the men who will sit as delegates in the San Francisco convention should be sufficient guarantee that the issues upon which the campaign is to be fought will be met with definite and concrete statements, and not cloudy and ambiguous terms as was the case in Chicago."

No Progressive Celebration.
Again in the White House, "I should hardly dignify them with that term," he said dryly. "I do not see how any genuine Progressive can subscribe to either the method, motive or meaning."

"The Republican platform and the nomination of the Republican candidates for the presidency and vice-presidency I have noticed with a deprecating shake of his head that very many Progressives have rent the skies with jubilation since the Republican convention completed its work."

"The Republican convention was the apotheosis of reaction. It was the direct antithesis of what I hope the Democratic convention at San Francisco will turn out to be. It is a shame that they call themselves Progressive, and who pretended to speak for the Progressive element in the Republican party sacrificed every principle that made attractive to the people of eight years ago in order to gratify the ambition of some of the present-day leaders to prevent the people of the United States from fulfilling their honest obligations to the rest of the world and to themselves. The abandonment at Chicago of the progressive spirit was woefully tragic. I hope and believe that the tragedy at Chicago will provide the Democratic convention with the object lesson in this direction that will not be overlooked."

I brought up the subject of prohibition, woman suffrage, of the high cost of living, of Mr. Bryan. The President made precisely the same reply to each inquiry. It was: "I have very great confidence in the sober judgment of the leaders of the Democratic party whose voice and influence will be felt at San Francisco. I believe they will provide a platform sufficiently broad, progressive, liberal, just and thoroughly Democratic to convince the people of the country of the complete honesty of the Democratic purpose, of the difference between it and the Republican party."

Has Not "Raised a Hand."
"I have not raised my hand or voice to aid in the promotion of any ambition for the Democratic presidential nomination, and I shall not do so. I think that the President of the United States who will sit in the San Francisco convention will earnestly try to provide a platform and candidates that will attract greater support than those put forward by the 'Chicago' convention. I am also confident that the Democratic leaders and delegates will hold the fullest appreciation of their obligations to the party and to the people. It is unthinkable that any Democrats should be influenced by the selfish and sinister motives that lie back of the Republican plan to stultify and discredit the United States in the eyes of the world."

"I do not believe that they will permit themselves to be led astray in order to gratify the vanity or promote the uncharitable or selfish impulses of any individual."

SEVERAL HUNDRED TRANSFER DRIVERS NOT BACK AT WORK

Several hundred of the 2000 transfer drivers and chauffeurs who went on a "voluntary vacation" last Saturday returned to work today. Transfer company officials would not give an estimate of the number who returned to work, but said the men were coming in more slowly than had been expected.

It was announced by the companies that they were ready to hire men who applied for jobs, whether former employees or new applicants.

About 300 drivers and chauffeurs who did not approve of the compromise made by their union Wednesday night held meetings at New Club Hall, Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue, today for discussion of the compromise terms under which wages were increased and the working day shortened.

Executive Gains 20 Pounds in Two Months and He Does More Work Than Before Confinement

Bears Evidence of Physical Suffering and Walks Slowly With Aid of Cane—Says He Feels Able to Take More Exercise.

By LOUIS SEIBOLD.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—The months of courageous battling to repair the consequences of illness resulting from the profligacy with which he had drawn upon his physical balance in the bank of nature has neither daunted the spirit nor impaired in the slightest degree the splendid intellect of Woodrow Wilson.

Nine months of isolation while the orderly processes of nature, combined with tender and efficient care, restored nervous and physical tissues strained by too heavy demands on a physique never robust at best, have manifested affected the flesh, but have not abridged the intense devotion of Mr. Wilson to the principles for which he fought with the grasping statesmen of Europe and political obstructionists of his own country.

The President has paid in the flesh. There is no doubt about that. But with sublime courage he fought while he lay almost physically helpless. Now that his complete restoration to health seems assured, he fights with determined purpose to bring America to what he considers his seat of duty to the rest of the world, with the fullest realization of his own duty to America. Mr. Wilson's vision and courage through these nine months of illness have but served to make him the more determined in his mission, and his appraisal of the world is still as firm as ever.

The other figure was that of the President, seated in an office chair. Mrs. Wilson was standing with her left hand on the back of his chair and her right arm around his waist. The President's face was pale, but his eyes were clear and his expression was one of calm determination.

Facility of Expression.
The correspondent heard him dictate his decisions on matters of great Governmental importance with facility of expression and directness of meaning that indicated no impairment of the efficient working machine that has known only the hardest kind of work for 40 years.

The correspondent talked with him for upward of an hour, in which he gave a wide range of subjects and concerning which he expressed himself, not only with Wilsonian vigor, but established the even more gratifying survival of the sense of humor.

The correspondent saw him walk from one apartment to another on Tuesday, and on Wednesday accompanied him as he walked with a cane to his motor car. The cane upon which his right hand found support was the sort of stick he used to thrash through the turnip patches when he was president of Princeton.

His use of it on Wednesday accentuated the heritage of his long illness, yet the halting movement of the motor agencies of his left leg imparted to him as being far less paralyzed than the President of the United States who had been so long in bed.

There was no dragging of the left foot as there would be if the President's physical condition was completely paralyzed. There was a tendency to lift it a trifle higher and in advance of the sturdy right limb.

The best proof of the great improvement in the President's physical condition was provided when he mounted three improvised wooden steps and entered the motor car with only such assistance as would naturally be given to a person convalescing from serious illness.

In appearance the President seemed much the same as on his return from Paris. He has gained more than 20 pounds in weight during the last two months. His face is not distorted in the slightest degree, as some of the unfriendly versions of his illness have asserted. The Wilson face is much the same as it was, though it bears the imprint of great physical suffering.

After he had worked, and he had talked for an hour, the President walked from his office chair on the balcony to the movies in the east room, slowly, cautiously, with confidence. Mrs. Wilson, the President and the correspondent composed the small and select audience that witnessed a "Bill" Hart thriller in the darkened chamber.

Following the show Mrs. Wilson, the President, Dr. Grayson, Secretary Tumulty and the correspondent discussed luncheon and lighter phases of current events. The President's appetite appeared to be very good, and he was in an entertaining mood. He even attempted a limerick but was prevented by an interruption.

The interview with the President, during which we discussed a wide range of subjects, was in the nature of a "visit" on his part to the people of the country. It had been arranged in accordance with a suggestion that the President indulge (through the New York World and Post-Dispatch) in a visit with the citizens of the United States for a discussion of the intimate and personal topics which have no place in the formal and official documents through which he transacts the business of the nation. The date was fixed for the first of June, but it was deferred until Tuesday last.

The appointment with the President was for 10:30 o'clock. At that hour the correspondent threaded the sidewalk of the office building to the west of the White House proper, where alert clerks and messengers, the regular detail of vigilant reports that "cover" the White House and little groups of waiters and maids, were at all times ready to receive the President.

An attendant piloted the correspondent under a long trellised arbor about the formal garden, riotous with the splendor of red and white hydrangeas, duchs, and brilliant roses, Japanese cherry trees and clinging clusters of Dorothy Perkins and Caroline Testout tree roses.

The President and Mrs. Wilson were found on the south balcony, which juts in a semi-circle out from the mansion, is 30 feet deep, 50 in width and looks out over an impressive stretch of velvety lawn hedged in with magnolias, Japanese quince, and other majestic maples and squat dogwoods.

Two figures were silhouetted at the edge of the balcony against the vista. One of these figures was standing. This was Mrs. Wilson, first lady of the land, in a dark, clinging dress, with a smile and a cordial welcome. The other figure was that of the President, seated in an office chair. Mrs. Wilson was standing with her left hand on the back of his chair and her right arm around his waist.

The President's face was pale, but his eyes were clear and his expression was one of calm determination. He was looking directly at the correspondent, and his hand was resting on his knee.

President Turns to His Work.
The President then excused himself and turned to the consideration of some official business. While he was engaged in this task, I had a chance to study him at close range and to make mental note of his system of working.

Mrs. Wilson took from the basket of documents requiring the President's attention. Mr. Tumulty drew up a chair to the office table before the President and sat down. He provided explanations of the documents and circumstances of the subject matter when asked to do so.

Admiral Grayson excused himself to attend to some professional business elsewhere. Mrs. Wilson, an admirably tactful wife, suggested that the President should rest for a few minutes. He declined the suggestion and continued to work.

There was a slight tendency on his part to "stare" at his left side. His arm, however, did not hang helplessly at his side, and he moved it frequently while I was with him, though with less freedom of movement than he displayed in the use of his right hand. The fact that he was so conscious of his left arm, probably had much to do with the favor he displayed to that limb. Neuritis is no new enemy to the President. He at intervals suffered from it for many years. Physical exercise prescribed for him by Dr. Grayson has proven so satisfactory that the President's physician is confident the attendant discomfort will soon be conquered.

One has only to look at the President to realize that he is a very sick man. But his appearance does not suggest any one of the organic afflictions that might be expected to result in complete physical incapacity. He is restrained from excessive exertion by the corrective measures of his physician. The damage resulting from his disregard of the rules of nature. The President made only one reference to the long illness through which he has passed, and that was when he was asked to give him some advice concerning a matter which the President had no information.

"I wonder what he wants, Tumulty," said the President. "I mean I wonder what kind of advice he wants. Here is something about which he probably knows everything. It is to know, but regarding which I am absolutely in the dark. Perhaps you had better wire him and ask him to stipulate exactly what kind of advice he wants. I have several kinds."

The correspondent's last preceding conversation with the President was on Sept. 27, in Southwestern Colorado.

That was the day before Mrs. Wilson and Dr. Grayson induced the President to abandon the tour he had undertaken to report to the people of the United States on his work as the head of the American delegation to the Paris peace conference. It was apparent to every person who accompanied the President on that tour that he had drawn too heavily on his balance in the bank of nature, and was not far from the point of physical and nervous collapse many days before he was ordered to stop. So I still held in my mind the picture of his returning to the train from a stroll with Mrs. Wilson and Dr. Grayson down one of the country roads in the valley near which the doctor had ordered him to stop.

At that time, I suppose that such tender vigilance is justified, but I can tell you now that I have been doing more amid this tranquil setting than I used to do when I spent my days in the office receiving all sorts of people on all sorts of errands.

"I have more time for deliberation and can concentrate with better advantage on the matters which come to me. This morning I was at my desk in my study, and then later on I may go for a motor ride. I get some exercise that is helpful to me but it is not as much as I should like, nor as much as I am going to indulge in later on."

While Mrs. Wilson was engaged in the supervision of her household, which embraces 32 rooms, the President "visited" with the people of the country. The correspondent recalled to him an address he had once heard him deliver. He had said that when he wanted to take counsel with the people of the country, he turned from the turmoil of the restless streets and permitted his eye and fancy to wander to the south and west, past the huge moonlight over the murky Potomac, threading a brown ribbon between the municipal limits of the capital and the Virginia hills and centered his vision on far away California, Florida, Oregon and Maine, and in between, in an effort to "feel the pulse" and probe the ambitions of the people, whose executive he is.

Eager to Make Personal Call.
"One of the great discomforts of my recent experience," said the President, in commenting on this practice, "has been that I am not permitted to indulge my wish to make a personal call upon the people directly. For this reason, I am later on. I am eager that it shall."

The President laughed when his attention was called to the charges frequently made during the Senate debates that he is an "autocrat," a "dictator" and "stubborn and several other disagreeable things."

Laughingly, he said: "You must remember we have a political campaign on. All kinds of criticisms and charges fill the air; investigations are the rule. The purpose of them is easy to understand, and you recall the fact that there is a political campaign in front of us. You would think, sometimes, we were bewailing a defeat instead of celebrating a victory."

During the hour that the President and I gossiped idly and visualized the tranquil scene before us, we emulated the example provided by the philosophic Carpenter and the sagacious Walrus immortalized in the infancy of the literary of Lewis Carroll. We talked of many things. We even discussed the high price of shoes, discussed the policies of certain Kings, and indulged in speculations as to the probable size of the next crop. But I do not recall that either one of us ever mentioned sealing wax.

The President told me that he naturally found great pleasure in reading, in which he is not restricted. I asked him what works or stories had recently impressed him most. He had said he had read three or four good detective stories to balance the serious and somewhat made most flattering reference to a story recently printed in the Atlantic Monthly and written by Margaret Prescott Montague. The title of it is, "Uncle Sam of Freedom Ridge."

He had started to arise when the correspondent came on to the balcony, but he had given no word of protest when he was asked to go away the deadly heat of July and August.

"As a matter of fact," said the Admiral, "the President doesn't mind the heat. He has given no word of protest when he was asked to go away the deadly heat of July and August."

"That lady has written a story which breathes of a patriotism so pure and wholesome as to make me of other things of life seem of little consequence. I wish that every person that questions the benefits to humanity that will be guaranteed by the League of Nations might read it. Don't forget to read it, Selbold."

The President made frequent references to the lighter side of politics and seemed to extract a good deal of quiet humor over the dilemma in which he was placed by the Republicans now find themselves.

"When a Republican becomes dissatisfied with his own party," said the President, "he has the making of a good Democrat in him. I expect to see many Progressive Republicans headed our way before the campaign is over."

Mrs. Wilson returned to add a cheerful and humorous description of incidents that struck her fancy. Few women possess a keener sense of humor than she, and though she laughingly avoided all reference to politics, she manifested genuine pleasure when informed that the best speeches delivered in the Republican convention at Chicago had been contributed by women, notably those by Mrs. Douglas Robinson, a sister of the late Theodore Roosevelt, and Mrs. Eugene Pfeiffer, who was Miss Alexandra Carlisle, an actress of distinction.

Walks to Movie Show.
Mr. Hoover, the major domo of the White House, came into the balcony at this juncture and announced that the movie show was about to begin. Mrs. Wilson called the President's personal attendant. The President arose from his chair with slight assistance. The attendant handed him a cane, and leaning on it, the President walked to the East Room, 40 feet away. Mrs. Wilson and I preceded him into the main corridor, and thence to the East Room, which is one of the most impressive apartments in America.

The President appeared to be entering the convalescent stage. Yet there was no hesitancy in his step or apparent lack of confidence. His movements, while slow, were not those of a man whose lower knowledge of what would happen to me was ever before me.

"I am coming around in good shape and could do a lot more things now if Mrs. Wilson and Dr. Grayson would kindly look the other way once in a while. I suppose that such tender vigilance is justified, but I can tell you now that I have been doing more amid this tranquil setting than I used to do when I spent my days in the office receiving all sorts of people on all sorts of errands."

The President appeared to be entering the convalescent stage. Yet there was no hesitancy in his step or apparent lack of confidence. His movements, while slow, were not those of a man whose lower limbs have become paralyzed. He did not drag his left foot. He raised it clear from the floor. A trifle higher than his right foot. He did not seem to me that he leaned very heavily upon his stick. He was in most cheerful spirits. His color seemed better, in fact, than the day before.

While advancing to the motor car, I called the attention of Mrs. Wilson and the President to a portrait of former President Arthur hanging in the corridor. This portrait of the Chesterfield New Yorker who succeeded Mr. Garfield presents him wearing a magnificent sable overcoat, almost as good as the one the late "Diamond Jim" Brady used to sport in upper Broadway. I told Mrs. Wilson and the President an anecdotal story, current in New York, that Mr. Arthur had halted the work of the painter to retrieve his fur coat from storage, even though the period was sweltering August.

The President stopped, and, turning to me, said: "Perhaps Mr. Arthur wanted to help along the business of the Hudson Bay Fur Company."

"The trunk," I replied, "that probably Mr. Arthur desired protection from the chilly attitude of the Republican party of his day toward his presidential aspirations."

"Oh, yes," said the President, with a grin of appreciation at his own pun.

By this time we had reached the motor car. Without aid the President lifted his left foot to the first step of the motor car. He seemed to think this display of energy too ambitious. He signalled to one of the attendants to relieve the President of his cane and lend slight assistance in the remaining two steps and into the car.

The President did not show any effects of the journey from the elevator to the motor and was smiling and breathing quietly as he settled in the tonneau. He extended his right hand and gave mine a firm grip.

As the car wheeled through the drive and into the open avenue beyond the White House grounds and the War, Navy and State Department Building, the President raised his head with his right hand in acknowledgment of my parting salute.

his Panama hat as we entered the magnificent East Room, where Dolley Madison, nearly a century ago, inaugurated the nearest approach to a court ball we have ever had in this country.

It was here also that Col. Roosevelt made a social lion out of Seth Bullock, the mighty hunter and guide; of Mike Donovan, the pugilist. It was here also that Mr. Taft shook hands for the last time with the late Col. Roosevelt. Here, too, it was the Prince of Wales, grandfather to the likeable young man who paid his respects to President Wilson in the sick chamber six or seven months ago, danced with the Washington belles in the early sixties. But Tuesday the great apartment was darkened with massive tapestries which draped the wide windows.

The President, Mrs. Wilson, and the correspondent were the only spectators at the movies, and we occupied the front and only seats. Back of us, in the tiered rows of the White House, were members of the White House staff, white and colored.

The movie showed Bill Hart at his best. The title of the play was "The Great Escape." It was a story of a man who had been captured by the enemy and who had to escape through a series of adventures. The President and the correspondent were both very interested in the movie.

JOHNSON TELLS OF KILLING HEFFNER "IN SELF-DEFENSE"

Defendant Testifies Man He Shot Attacked Him With Brass Cuspidor Before He Fired Fatal Shot.

EYEWITNESS GIVES SIMILAR TESTIMONY

Heffner and Charles Cruse Accused Him of Cheating Heffner and Cruse's Brother, Defendant Testifies.

Willis L. Johnson, 30 years old, of 4307 Maryland avenue, a real estate dealer, took the witness stand in his own defense today at his trial on a manslaughter charge in connection with the shooting and killing of Asa Heffner of West Frankfort, Ill., Jan. 23 last. The shooting occurred in Johnson's office in the De Menil Building, Seventh and Pine streets. Heffner died the next day. The case is expected to go to the jury today.

Johnson testified that, on the day before the shooting, Heffner and Charles Cruse of Abilene, Kan., visited his office and accused him of having cheated Heffner and Cruse's brother out of money. The following day, he said, Heffner returned to his office, and after talking with him a short time, attacked him with a brass cuspidor. Johnson said he did not fire on Heffner until after Heffner had struck him several times with the cuspidor. He denied that he owed money to Heffner or to Cruse's brother.

While Heffner and Cruse were in his office the day before the shooting, he said, a young woman client knocked at the office door and started to come in. Johnson said that when he tried to advance and talk to the young woman, Heffner pulled her back and said: "You'll stay here until we settle with you." Later, he said, Heffner became so threatening that he left the office and was afraid to go back.

Real Estate Dealer Testifies. R. H. Dunaway, real estate and lumber dealer, of 4217 Delmar boulevard, testified that on the day before the shooting he saw Heffner in Johnson's office by Heffner and Cruse. He said he was asked to leave the room while they conferred with Johnson, but he overheard enough of the conversation, Dunaway said, Heffner told him Johnson had "skinned" him out of $100.

Henry Turentine of McLeansboro, Ill., who was a clerk for Johnson and was the only eye witness to the shooting, testified at yesterday's hearing that Johnson did not shoot until Heffner had attacked him and had struck him repeatedly with a brass cuspidor.

Turentine told of a visit to Johnson's office by Heffner and Charles Cruse of Abilene, Kan. He said he was asked to leave the room while they conferred with Johnson, but he overheard enough of the conversation to know that it was heated and he heard Cruse say that Johnson and Cruse's brother had been in the tire patch business together and that when the books were audited they showed a $1300 discrepancy. After remaining out of the room some time, he said, he returned. Heffner and Cruse were there, but Johnson had gone out.

The next day, he said, "Heffner came in alone about noon and said to Johnson: 'That was a long three minutes you stayed out yesterday.' There was talk on general subjects, he said, and Heffner asked Johnson for a private conference and Johnson said: 'I have no further business to talk with you boys.'"

Heffner attacked Johnson. Turentine testified that Heffner then picked up the cuspidor and struck Johnson in the head with it repeatedly. He said he did not see Johnson draw a weapon, but he heard a shot and saw Johnson with a revolver in his hand.

W. A. Moellman, insurance agent, former member of the City Council, testified that on the afternoon of the shooting he went to the office to deliver a policy to Turentine and found Johnson in conference with Heffner and Cruse. He said Johnson introduced them to him. While he was there, the telephone bell rang and Johnson went out and did not return.

After Johnson's departure, he said, Cruse turned to him and said: "You spotted it all by coming in. He got a thing out of the case and man quoted Heffner as saying: 'I'll get him tomorrow.'"

Moellman said he went to Johnson's office shortly before noon the next day and told him of this remark of Heffner's. Johnson, he testified, said to him: "You saved my life by coming in when you did yesterday."

Aged Man on Boyhood Trail. BRAINER, Minn.—Thoughts of boyhood days—dim memories of more than a century ago and visions of fish sparkling in the waters of extreme Northern Minnesota, have proved an irresistible lure for Gabe-Nah-Gwan-Woo, the 130-year-old Indian of Cass Lake. "Old John" as he is familiarly known, packed his rods and lines and with his family departed for the Rainy River country to try again his fisherman's luck in the waters he has not visited for nearly 115 years.

ELWELL'S HOUSEKEEPER AND CHAUFFEUR WILL BE HELD AS WITNESSES IN KILLING

Mrs. Larsen Says She Hid Garments to Shield "Woman as a Sex"—a "Miss Wilson" Often Used Them, She Says.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, June 18.—Marle Elwell, housekeeper for Joseph B. Elwell, wealthy gambler and gambler, who was murdered in his home, 244 West Seventy-third street, and the chauffeur, Edward Rhodes, accompanied detectives to the Criminal Courts building this afternoon. Assistant District Attorney Joyce had announced that they would be formally arraigned as material witnesses. District Attorney Swann said he had merely asked to have them appear to be questioned.

A "Miss Wilson," the woman to whom belonged the pink silk kimono found in the bedroom of Elwell the morning of his murder, Mrs. Larsen told District Attorney Swann today. Although the identity of "Miss Wilson" was such to have been made known to Swann, nothing further concerning her was revealed.

The owner of the kimono is reported to have rushed into Elwell's home the morning of the murder in an effort to obtain her belongings. "I hid the clothing of a woman who sometimes visited Mr. Elwell, after I found him dead, to save the name not only of one woman, but woman as a sex," said Mrs. Larsen. Mrs. Larsen made this admission in an examination before 10 detectives, 20 newspaper men and several assistant district attorneys. She also said:

"I did not want this woman's name or the name of woman to be disclosed by being publicly dragged through the mire and scandal following the death of Mr. Elwell. I thought that the name of woman is a sacred thing, and for this reason I hid the garments in the wash tub in the kitchen."

Mrs. Larsen said that the clothing had been in the house since last October and that it had been used frequently by a woman whom she knew as "Miss Wilson." Mrs. Larsen said that this was not the woman's correct name, but the District Attorney knew it. This mysterious woman was described as pretty, plump, dark and about 24 years old. Swann, who questioned Mrs. Larsen, said that this was not the woman's correct name, but the District Attorney knew it. This mysterious woman was described as pretty, plump, dark and about 24 years old. Swann, who questioned Mrs. Larsen, said that this was not the woman's correct name, but the District Attorney knew it.

Describing the murder, Mrs. Larsen said that the last time she saw Elwell was on Thursday, June 7. She was working in the kitchen when Elwell came down with hat and coat on and told her to put away his dress clothes. He did not tell her where he was going and left the house immediately.

Left House Afternoon Before. Mrs. Larsen said she left the house about 12:30 in the afternoon. When she came in Friday morning, about 8:30 o'clock, both the front and back doors were locked. Upon entering she saw Elwell's body in the reception room, and rushing to him, discovered the wound in his head. She called the police, who summoned an ambulance and laid the body out. Moved about six feet to the right of Elwell's chair she found the exploded shell of a 45-caliber revolver.

Her first thought was that someone had murdered her employer, she knew, and that he would never kill himself. When asked her religion Mrs. Larsen said that she was a Lutheran. She swore that she had found no revolver. Following the arrival of the police, she went up stairs to the bedroom, where she found the sheets on the bed turned back as though someone was going to sleep there. One side of the bed looked as though a body had rested on it for a time. She then went to the closet, got the clothes and hid them.

When asked about keys Mrs. Larsen said that last December Elwell had told her that he had a key to the back door outside the door so that W. H. Pendleton might enter, but that it had not been done since. The locks on the doors of the house had been changed last February.

"Both Mrs. Larsen and Rhodes knew a great deal about this case," said Joyce, "and before the mystery is cleared I am sure that they will tell everything they know. We will ask the Judge before whom they are arraigned that they be held in jail or be detained in the House of Detention as material witnesses."

"Today is the big day. I expect to have some important information. I feel certain now that a man shot Elwell and that a woman was the cause of the shooting," said Joyce. "We will continue to work on every clue."

"We have discovered that the girl who telephoned to Elwell on the morning of the murder was a National Guard girl, whose name we will not divulge at present."

Joyce said that a short time after the murder was discovered a young woman called the house on the telephone. She said she had an appointment at the Pennsylvania Hotel and that she wanted to know if Elwell was not there. The young woman was told that Elwell was ill and was requested to come to the house. She came and was notified of the tragedy. She was questioned and permitted to go home.

Three Keys Made for Door. Samuel Rudin, a locksmith, at 184 West End avenue, a few blocks from the Elwell home, told the police that a chauffeur had three keys made for the front door of the

NO CLEW FOUND TO IDENTITY OF HEADLESS BODY

Physicians Believe Torso Found in Lake Is That of White Woman, but Blood Test Is Planned.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. ST. JOSEPH, Mo., June 18.—A mystery without the semblance of a start toward solution is the status today of the case of the headless and nude body of a young woman found yesterday in Lake Contrary. The police and county authorities declare that they are without any tangible information so far that may prove of value in solving the affair.

Last yesterday afternoon physicians and the police gave their opinion that the body is that of a white woman. However, there is some division of opinion on that point. Those believing the victim is a white woman explain that her hands are shapely, with tapering fingers and well manicured nails. In an Elwell's chauffeur, according to the police, said he had two keys made for the front door of the Elwell home last December.

An anonymous letter received in today's mail at the District Attorney's office, typewritten on good quality note paper, read:

"Dear Mr. Swann: Perhaps it will help you to know that Elwell pret with two parties in the Pennsylvania Railroad Station. Thirty-third street and Seventh avenue, on Friday morning at 5 o'clock, city time. The station clocks registered one hour later. This is as much as I can tell you without involving myself."

Every plausible clue is being run down by at least 50 detectives. Philip Bender, the taxicab driver who drove the Lewisohn party home the night of the murder, is being examined by Elwell, will be among those examined. Bender insists that he drove only two men and a woman away from the Frodo party are equally certain that two men and two women were in the cab. If Bender's story is accurate, the District Attorney is anxious to know what became of the other members of the Lewisohn party. It is argued by officials working on the case, if the fourth member of the party left the Lewisohns at the Follies with Elwell, a long step toward clearing up the mystery.

Many Inquire About Body. A number of calls from persons who refused to reveal their identities were received yesterday by H. O. Sidenfaden, undertaker, who has the body, asking a description of the murdered woman. In each case the person volunteered they had missing relatives or friends and thought they might be accounted for through the headless body. One woman, who telephoned, said her daughter had disappeared. She refused to tell her name. Another left a telephone number, but a call to the number failed to get any information.

The police have received several messages from persons in other cities and towns describing missing relatives. In two cases marks of identification were furnished, but examination of the body failed to satisfy the specific inquiries.

Others are of the opinion that the body failed to satisfy the specific inquiries. The police have received several messages from persons in other cities and towns describing missing relatives. In two cases marks of identification were furnished, but examination of the body failed to satisfy the specific inquiries.

Bed Rails May Furnish Clue. The police hope the wire clothes line and the two bed rails may prove of value as a clue. The bed rails are from a common iron bed and are painted a light blue, and show the marks where the slats rested on them. Wired to the rails, the murderers evidently hoped the weight of the iron would hold the body beneath the water.

A blood-stained motor car yesterday reported to have been noticed abandoned near Armour, a station 16 miles away, still is a mystery. Detectives who yesterday were in search of the car were unable to find it or the persons who reported seeing it. Last night, however, the police learned their search had been in the wrong neighborhood.

T. A. Johnson, chief of detectives, said he had a report that a car containing a blood-stained shirt was noticed abandoned on the Jefferson highway Monday.

The inquest over the murdered woman will be held this afternoon. Acquaintance of Missing Granite City Girl to See Body.

The prosecuting authorities of Madison County, Ill., in their search for Bertha Stein, 22 years old, of Granite City, have taken up the suggestion that she may have been the young woman whose headless body was found Wednesday in Lake Contrary, near St. Joseph, Mo.

State Attorney Streuber of Edwardsville said today that he had arranged to send a woman acquaintance of Bertha Stein to St. Joseph to view the body.

Bertha Stein has been sought by the State's Attorney for a week as a witness in the inquiry into East Side freight car robberies. She was employed on a farm near Granite City, and the farm was included in the official search of the car.

A petition to probate Elwell's will was filed with the Surrogate yesterday by a representative of the law firm of Davies, Auerbach & Cornell, attorneys for the defendant. The value of the estate is given as "upwards of $10,000 in personal property, and real estate of value unknown."

Efforts also will be made today to ascertain definitely whether Elwell today had the means to hire a spot or whether his housekeeper hurriedly made up the bed after she found him in a dying condition. Throughout the investigation it has been assumed that Elwell had not gone to bed, but in view of certain relations and corrections made in the testimony of Mrs. Larsen she will be questioned definitely on this point.

A visit at 5 a. m. by a man and a woman to the home of Elwell last Friday, the morning of his murder, under investigation by the police seeking to unravel the mystery.

FATHER OF STOLEN BABY EXHAUSTED FUNDS IN RANSOM

$12,000 Which Was Left for "The Crank" Was in Bills of Passable Denominations and Was Soon Taken.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—George H. Coughlin, father of the abducted Norristown baby, exhausted all his own funds. It is stated, in paying a $12,000 "ransom" without recovering his son. The $12,000 was in passable denominations and in-closed in a canvas bag at 11:32 o'clock Monday night by the hopeful father. He was accompanied on his trip to deposit the money at an agreed place by Maj. Charles T. Lazere, his friend and counsel. Both were unarmed.

Fifty thousand dollars reward will be offered for the arrest and conviction of the kidnappers. The reward is being raised by Norristown residents and college friends of Coughlin at Princeton. The business men of Norristown have undertaken to raise half the reward and the Princeton men the other. Coughlin has contributed $6,000 toward the fund and four other Norristown residents have contributed $1000 each. An additional $12,000 is expected to be raised in smaller amounts. The county commissioners offer $1500. Frank L. Renninger, District Attorney, will handle the fund.

The father, it is said, used $2000 of borrowed money to meet the demand. Friends of the Coughlins say the baby's father is not a wealthy man. The Coughlins' town house in Norristown is said to be owned by the missing baby's grandfather. The two weeks ago at 2 o'clock in the morning, it is said, is owned by Mrs. Coughlin, mother of the abducted child.

Maj. Lazere, commenting on the ransom which, it is now believed was obtained by a swindler, said he had not advised Coughlin to pay the ransom. He said he informed the father he would aid him in every way possible, but that Coughlin himself must make the decision on the payment of the ransom.

C. E. KIMBALL, 63, DIES SUDDENLY AT HIS SUMMER HOME

President of Mt. Olive and Staunton Coal Co. Was Apparently in Good Health June 8 When He Started East.

Charles E. Kimball, 63 years old, of 18 Lenox place, suffered a stroke of apoplexy and died yesterday afternoon at his summer home in East Haverhill, N. H.

He was president of the Mt. Olive and Staunton Coal Co., and was apparently in good health when he departed for the East, June 8. His wife, Mrs. Maie Kimball, was with him at his death. Three sons are in St. Louis. They are W. G. Alden and Charles E. Kimball Jr.

Kimball organized the Mount Olive and Staunton Coal Co. 20 years ago. He also was vice-president of the Litchfield & Madison Railroad, which runs from the company's mines to Madison, Ill. He came to St. Louis in 1914, having previously resided in New York, where he was interested in coal and railroads. He was born in Bristol, R. I., and was a graduate of Brown University in the class of 1877.

greater part of it is constructive and progressive; nothing prevents the people from making a plank on the league, etc., from being given a forward-looking interpretation; some things, including a reorganization of our election expenditures and the primaries, are not adequately dealt with.

"In these times when the great problems and issues created by the war are new and are so complex, we must expect a wide divergence of view among the members of the party as to the methods by which they are to be met. It follows, therefore, that if there was to have been unity in the convention, there had to be a large measure of compromise on the part of the platform and the candidates as proof that we have not arrived at an era of new political and social tendencies and for this same reason the same divergent groups and the same multitude of compromises will be found in the Democratic convention."

Disaster in Complex Group. "Nothing could be more disastrous than the development of several party organizations representing the complexion of every group in the country. With the legislative and executive branches of government separated than in any other democracy, the whole process of constructive government will come to an end if we have more than two parties, and that means the end of the party system as we know it."

"I am convinced that those of us and I believe they are the majority of the party—who hold more definite views, could not, even were we so inclined, successfully effect the consummation of such views outside of the party, and that means only from actual administration."

Sees No Danger of Reaction. "I am convinced that unity of action among the liberal thinkers of the party, especially if they exert themselves in the current of congressional elections, will insure the country against legislative reaction."

"If the Republican party is not to be irrevocably split, I cannot conceive that Senator Harding will, for one moment, submit the administrative side of the Government to the domination of any group or party. Furthermore, we have the possibility of having administrative measures and policies determined by full Cabinet responsibility and of having co-operation restored with the legislative side of the Government. I need not reiterate my conviction that the constructive ability so critically needed for the vigorous business reorganization of the Federal Government and to meet the many economic issues before us lies in the Republican party."

"For all these reasons, I believe that those of us who look upon party organization, not from the point of view of partisanship, but solely from the point of view of its usefulness as an agency of government service to the country, should support the Republican party at the polls."

POWER HOUSE BLOWOUT STOPS ILLINOIS INTERURBAN SERVICE

An electrical switch in the Edgemont power house of the East St. Louis & Suburban Railway burned out at 6:45 o'clock this morning and delayed thousands of workers on their way to East St. Louis and St. Louis from Belleville, O'Fallon and Lebanon, Ill., and smaller towns on the lines serving that territory. At Edgemont the lines to the three towns use the same track.

East St. Louis city service was not interrupted by the accident, which was repaired by 8 a. m. Some cars arrived in St. Louis an hour and a half late on the lines affected. Coal miners also were delayed.

not protect itself to the extent of recording the mortgages he gave. "Three Loans on One Truck." The loan company's experience with "Martin" has been prompt payment, and any paper he gave was accepted without question. We know of one case where he obtained a loan on the same automobile, getting nearly full value of the truck on each.

"I have not been able to fathom why Martin found it necessary to raise a large sum of money so hurriedly. His business did not need it, and no part of the money apparently was used in the business. He was selling trucks rapidly and apparently piling up large profits. His commissions on the sale of the T trucks alone, was about $75,000. It has been suggested that he played margins on the stock market, and that his first spurious paper was to post for the same purpose. Margins lost in stock dealings, I have been told that he scanned the financial page of his newspaper regularly.

"It appears that many persons recognized him as Arthur Raymond. It may have been his fear of exposure as a man sought by the police that caused him to leave hurriedly. He left behind a business which I estimate will show $100,000 in the investment. There was no apparent condition in his business which would cause his departure."

Raymond, as told in late editions of yesterday's Post-Dispatch, came to St. Louis from Chicago in 1913. His brother, Clement, now treasurer of the Martin Motor Truck Co., had preceded him here about a year. A man still in the automobile industry here and who knew Raymond at this period related incidents following his arrival. Raymond's uncle, by marriage, Paul Bertrand, now owner of an automobile repair shop at 4030 Olive street, was running the Star Auto Vehicle Co. at 4237 Delmar boulevard. Raymond went to live with Bertrand and was employed by him. He didn't know a hub cap from a differential when he came here and did not seem eager to learn the business, so was used as a driver only in emergencies. The other chauffeur, "Iked him and dubbed him 'The Little Frog,' because of his pronounced French accent. Shortly after his arrival he disappeared and it was said that the police were looking for him.

Details of Godard Case. The death of Godard occurred on March 29, 1913. An Olive Street and street car was proceeding south on Boyle avenue and was approaching McPherson. Raymond was driving Godard west in McPherson. He stated that "Godard's" request that he did not think he could stop in the street to avoid a collision with the street car, so stepped on the accelerator in the hope of crossing safely ahead of the street car. The rear end of the automobile, he said, struck the rear of Godard and Godard was thrown to the street and killed.

Raymond was held under a charge of criminal carelessness by the Coroner's jury and was released on bond. At the time his bond was returnable in court, the grand jury had not completed investigation of the case and Raymond's bond was released. When the indictment charging manslaughter was returned, police sought him, but city officers told him that he had left the city.

Made $10,000 on Coal. It appears that he went to Herrin, Ill., where he obtained a position as clerk for the Taylor Coal Co. It is related that in 1917, Raymond forfeited his coal shortage and obtained for a sum said to be $500, coal options which brought him $10,000. He returned with this capital to St. Louis, assumed the name "Frank A. Martin" and opened a small repair shop at 3300 Pine street, with his brother, Clement. The business flourished and as has been related, assumed magnitude early last year when "Martin" received a representative here of the Diamond T trucks, already having taken the Denby agency.

In June, 1919, he purchased the home of R. H. Stein, of 125 Hartley road, Clayton, for a stated price of $5500. Deeds of trust for $7500, however, still are recorded against the property. None of the furniture was removed before "Martin's" departure with his wife and child on June 8.

Department of Justice Announces District Attorneys Cannot Get Aid.

By the Associated Press. WASHINGTON, June 1.—Because of the failure of Congress to provide the necessary funds, the Department of Justice will not be able to employ special attorneys to handle the prosecution of cases growing out of the violations of the prohibition enforcement law after June 30, it was said today at the department.

District attorneys have notified the department that they cannot enforce the Volstead act without assistance and officials declare that the department faces the alternative of drafting men from other branches of the government or leaving the district attorneys without aid in handling of the cases rapidly accumulating in the various districts.

G. O. P. TICKET IS A SURPRISE IN WASHINGTON STATE

Republicans on Coast Hope Harding Can Carry State if Properly Presented to People.

WOMEN HAD WANTED HOOVER ON TICKET

Pronounced Leaning Toward McAdoo on Democratic Side, but Some Wonder if Cox Will Be Nominated.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPOKANE, Wash., June 18.—Warren G. Harding is little known out here, so the first reaction to the man chosen by the Republican national convention is one of surprise mingled with hope. This part of Washington contains not a few Progressives, though the number who are willing to be characterized as such is dwindling. Some disappointment over the failure of the convention to name either as President or Vice President some one around whom the Progressives could rally, is inevitable. Four years ago the women of this State gave the electoral vote to Wilson. This year women seem to have made themselves vocal only with respect to Herbert Hoover, and now that he is eliminated in the presidential contest the feminine section of the electorate has no definite objective. Senator Harding is being represented as a good citizen, a simple American born on the farm, and a self-made man. If his managers are skillful in their approach to states like this, they will win votes for Harding.

For, broadly speaking, the Republicans here would have preferred Gov. Lowden or Gen. Wood. Indeed, there was a substantial confidence felt in the capacity of the Illinois Governor. But Harding is all new to the voters. The people are favorably inclined, however. They want to vote against the mistakes of the Wilson administration, but mostly they want an executive in whom they can have absolute confidence. If the campaign managers can instill such confidence with respect to the Harding personality, the result, even at this early date, is not difficult to conjecture.

Leaning Towards McAdoo.

But on the Democratic side there is a pronounced leaning toward McAdoo, and as one Republican of prominence expressed it, the nomination of McAdoo would give the Democrats a fighting chance hereabouts. He was basing his assertion on the hold which McAdoo has upon the railroad brotherhoods and organized labor and their families.

Gov. Cox has been very little known out here, but since the newspapers have been telling how he carried Ohio three times during the same period that Harding served, the people are beginning to wonder if the Democrats, too, are going to nominate a man from Ohio. Curiously enough, however, there is a vital interest in whether or not Cox and McAdoo are dry on the liquor question. McAdoo has the indorsement of the Anti-Saloon League, while Cox is believed by local Democrats to have moist leanings. So far as this State is concerned, the dries would have a better chance.

The people of Washington are tired of the liquor question, but what they are mostly tired of is the liquor question in politics. Any Democratic candidate need not apply for votes in the State of Washington on the basis of wetness alone. He had better count on some of the populous Eastern states, where the advantages of prohibition are still imaginary.

Bryan Held in Esteem.

Another thing is that William Jennings Bryan is looked upon by the farmer as a teacher of agrarian gospel, and this is the country where he is by no means held in such light esteem as in certain parts of the East. To be sure, this is an entirely different part of the world from New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts. For instance, while Republicans dislike the Wilson administration as a matter of party loyalty, they don't dislike with the bitterness or depth of feeling that the average Republican in the East releases when engaged in political conversations.

Perhaps it is distance, but the State of Washington—or, at least, this end of it—isn't afraid that the League of Nations or the peace treaty will work the harm Senator Johnson says it will? Even the Republican newspapers in this section are willing to take a chance on the treaty of Versailles and the league with reservations. They think it better than nothing; and, if there is any concrete disappointment about the Republican convention, it is about the platform rather than the candidate.

Want Treaty Declaration.
A straight-out-and-out declaration about the Peace Treaty with reservations would have been very welcome hereabouts and folks now are inclined to look upon the plank about the League of Nations as "a superb piece of pussyfooting," as one Republican expressed it.

It is pretty early yet and such disappointment as prevails may disappear, but the main things for a party and a candidate to do to get the votes in the State of Washington is to inspire confidence. This is the task that Senator Harding and his campaign managers have before them. And there are a good many Progressives who will have to be coddled if they are to embrace the platform and candidate by the time November comes around.

PLEADS GUILTY OF BIGAMY

A marriage solemnized in St. Louis May 21 yesterday earned a prison sentence for Ernest Allen, 24 years old, is a farmer of Mount Pleasant, Ill. May 20 was default divorce day in the Circuit Court there, and Allen got a decree, uncontested, from Mrs. Grace Allen. The decree had not been entered, however, when, the following day, he eloped to St. Louis with Mrs. Olive W. Ayers of Mount Pleasant, and they were married. He was arrested on a charge of bigamy when they returned the next day and last Saturday was indicted. He pleaded guilty at Lincoln and was given an indeterminate sentence of from one to five years.

PLANS FOR PERMANENT JUNIOR C. OF C. MADE

Committee Reports to Convention Here—St. Louisian Probable Choice for President.

The Committees on Constitution and Resolutions of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce, which is holding its first convention at Hotel Statler, recommended to the Board of Directors today plans for the permanent organization of the body. St. Louis will be the permanent headquarters of the national junior chamber under these plans, and the number of vice presidents will be increased from three to four.

each to be in charge of one district of the country.

It was reported that the unanimous re-election of Henry Gleason Jr., of St. Louis, founder of the movement and of the St. Louis Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be recommended. He was made president of the preliminary organization at the caucus here several months ago.

Local chambers will be limited hereafter to one delegate per 100 members, but at least two, and no more than 10 delegates must be sent, according to another recommendation, which fixes dues of the local chambers to the national chamber at from $25 to $250 a year. The committee plans raising the age limit to 35, instead of 30. The minimum age of members is 18 years.

Hear Waterways Address.
James E. Smith, president of the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association, addressed the convention in the forenoon on the urgency of developing inland rivers for transportation.

To reduce the cost of living, he said, production must be increased, with a corresponding increase in transportation facilities. Maximum production, he declared, will result in an oversupply and manufacturers, in seeking foreign markets, will need more methods of transporting their goods.

"Congress is doing nothing toward providing ample transportation," Smith said. "Within the past few weeks it passed the smallest rivers and harbors bill that has been offered since 1901—only $12,000,000. Following this picaresque policy, it will take at least 50 years to put the waterways of the country into practical and profitable use. Waterway transportation is one of the great accomplishments which your new organization should undertake to achieve."

President John G. Lonsdale of the National Bank of Commerce and Carl J. Baer, production manager of the Chamber of Commerce, spoke on production and Neil Brown, association editor of "America at Work," made an address. An afternoon conference of secretaries from the various cities was arranged at the D. R. Francis home, new home of the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund Has No Solicitors

THE Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund wishes again to call to the attention of the public that it has no solicitors of cash contributions, and requests that it be notified immediately by telephone of any attempts at street or house-to-house collections of money in the fund's name. Cash donations properly should be sent direct to the fund in care of the cashier of the Post-Dispatch.

To prevent any possibility of dishonesty in the fund's name.

the public is asked to give no money in any way, or to donate any supplies to anyone claiming to be working for the fund who is a stranger. It is desired that as far as possible workers sell tickets and solicit supplies for bazaar and carnivals and stands, among persons with whom they are acquainted.

The Milk and Ice Fund no longer approves amateur entertainments in its name unless the entire receipts, less necessary expenses, go to help the babies.

Diamond in Tooth.
COLUMBUS, Ind.—A diamond in his tooth is the contribution of Bert Weinsheimer, an employee at Moore's tannery, to new methods of personal adornment. In Columbus Weinsheimer had a defective front tooth, but the weird artistry of a dentist has transformed the defect into a knockout. A large gold filling now provides a proper background for a diamond which sparkles every time Weinsheimer opens his mouth. Weinsheimer recently came to Columbus from Boston.

Combing Won't Rid Hair of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, (silk and soft), and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

THREE BOYS RAISE MONEY FOR MILK AND ICE FUND

Many More Contributions Needed to Carry on Work of Supplying Necessaries to Babies.

CONTRIBUTIONS.
Previously acknowledged $619.51
Lemonade Stand, 4520 McPherson $ 25
Total $622.76

Contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund are coming in very slowly since the sudden drop in temperature Wednesday, only $3.25 being received yesterday to help save the lives of the babies in the tenement districts whose mothers are unable to buy pure milk and ice for them.

This amount was earned by a refreshment stand conducted at 4520 McPherson avenue by Lester Herman, Dan Kilgusmith and Gordon Zoller. In addition to selling lemonade they disposed of several quarts of ice cream and cleared $3.25 in a short time.

The vital necessity of pure milk for babies is well known, and the need for ice in the summer is apparent. Bacteria do not thrive as readily in milk which is kept cold all the time.

For more than 15 years the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund has conducted a campaign during the warm weather to supply pure milk and free ice to children whose parents cannot readily afford these necessities. The Post-Dispatch merely acts as the agent for the conducting of the work and every penny that is given to help the babies goes for that purpose. All contributions are acknowledged in the Post-Dispatch and the administration expenses of the work are borne by it.

WHISKY AND GIN SEIZED IN RAID ON MARKET STREET HOTEL

Saloon Man, Hotel Keeper and Woman Held—Minor Says He Paid $25 for Two Pints.

In two raids yesterday on the Regal Hotel, 1909 Market street, police and Federal agents arrested the proprietor, William A. Lawrence, 42 years old; Mrs. Lee St. John, 25, and John Graser, 52, a former bartender and now proprietor of a soft drink stand at 1905 Market street, and confiscated in Graser's room a quantity of whisky, gin and distilled water, which he said he bought before prohibition became effective.

The raids followed complaint by Harry Mercer, 30, of Christopher, Ill., a miner, who said he had rented a room at the place earlier in the day and had been asked by the negro porter if he would like some liquor. He said the porter sold him two pints of whisky for $25 and in addition sent two women to the room. One of the women, he said, robbed him of $50 after the porter had knocked him down and sat on him in the room.

Graser was arrested on the second raid, made by Federal agents, when the liquor was found in his room. He said the liquor sold at the place to Mercer had no connection with his "private stock" and he knew nothing of that transaction.

VATICAN ANXIOUS OVER ZIONISM

Considers Subjugation by Jews of Any Other Race Intolerable.

ROME, June 18.—Anxiety regarding the question of Zionism is felt in Vatican circles, according to reports here. The Osservatore Romano, organ of the Holy See, states the Vatican is able to accept without too great apprehension the re-establishment of a Hebrew "hearth and home" in Palestine, but would consider intolerable any subjugation by the Jews of other races and religions already established there. The Holy See, the newspaper says, would exert all its influence against such a course.

Sir Herbert Samuel, British High Commissioner for Palestine, will arrive here shortly, and hope is expressed that he will reach an understanding on the question with the Vatican.

Miami, Taking Fast Match, Eliminates St. Louis From Polo Championship Games

Red Birds of St. Louis Country Club, Lose in Last Period of Play, After Taking Early Lead—Final Match Tomorrow.

St. Louis was eliminated from the Mid-Western polo championships yesterday afternoon, when the Red Birds of the Country Club were defeated by the Miami four of Dayton, O., at the Country Club grounds by a score of 10 goals to 7. The Onwensia four of Chicago, which won over the St. Louis Shamrocks Wednesday, and the Dayton team will meet tomorrow afternoon in the match which will settle the title.

Yesterday's game was probably the fastest and most desperately contested match ever played on the local field, and the result was in doubt until the final chukker, when, by rapid work, the visitors knocked three goals, while the Red Birds were scoring once. Despite the character of the play, the game was exceedingly clean throughout, Earl Reynolds of Chicago, the referee, not calling a foul at any time.

In the seventh period, when the play was fiercest, H. E. Tolbott Jr., No. 3, of the Dayton team, and one of the bulwarks of the visitors' offense, was badly hurt by an accidental blow from the mallet of M. B. Wallace Jr., the youthful member of the Country Club team. Tolbott's left cheek was cut to the bone. Time was called and the injured player was assisted from the field. On the side lines his wound was dressed and, with his face bandaged, he went back into the struggle and aided materially in winning the game after that for his team.

Red Birds Had Lead. The Red Birds made an effort to run away with the match at the start and almost succeeded, for at the end of the third period they had scored four goals to Miami's one. In the fourth chukker, however, Miami got to business and scored three times, and after that the result was in doubt until the last few minutes of play.

The mounts of the two teams played an important part in the result. Dayton brought over many horses and after the first half of the game were able to outrun the St. Louisans in every dash down the field. Then, too, the visiting players were younger men than the veteran Red Birds, with one exception, and were better able to come through and continue the tremendously rapid pace set from the outset.

George and Ed Simmons and Sam Davis, the three older players of the Red Birds, tried perceptibly to keep the match from becoming a rout, but they were out of the game before they had a chance to do so. Yesterday he showed too much of a tendency to keep his eye on the ball.

Team Work Excellent. The contest, in contrast to Wednesday's play, was open and the team work of both sides was excellent. The mallet work was about even but, as said before, Miami was decidedly favored in the matter of horses.

There will be no match game this afternoon, the scheduled game between the two losing St. Louis teams being called off. Tomorrow's championship match will be called at 4 o'clock and the Country Club, which is trying to interest non-members of the club in the sport, announces that ample provision will be made for automobile parties and every one who cares to see the game.

THE GAME IN DETAIL.
The Lineup. Red Birds—No. 1, E. H. Simmons; No. 2, M. B. Wallace, Jr.; No. 3, G. W. Simmons (captain); No. 4, S. C. Davis. Miami—No. 1, G. H. Mead; No. 2, T. E. Patterson (captain); No. 3, H. E. Tolbott Jr.; No. 4, J. D. Platt. Referee—Reynolds of Chicago. Scorer—Ripley. Timekeeper—Hawkins.

The Red Birds knock the ball in, but Davis backs it, and E. H. Simmons takes it through for the Red Birds. Miami gets the ball on the throw in, but Davis takes it away, and feeds it to Simmons, who knocks to Wallace, who barely misses goal. End of third period. This was an open period with splendid team work on both sides. The Miami ponies outran the Red Birds, although the St. Louis team seemed to have a shade better mallet work. Score, Red Birds, 4; Miami, 1.

Fourth Period. Miami knocks in, but Wallace gets the ball and knocks it to E. H. Simmons, who scores. Tolbott of Miami gets the ball on the throw in, knocks it to Patterson, who feeds it to Mead, who scores for Miami. Miami gets the ball on the throw in, Tolbott taking it up near the Red Birds' goal, feeding it to Patterson, who scores again for Miami. End of period. Score, Red Birds, 5; Miami, 4.

Fifth Period. Tolbott, for Miami, gets the ball on the throw-in, feeds it to Patterson, who knocks it to Mead, who scores. The Red Birds get the ball but lose it to Miami. Patterson takes it up the field near the Red Birds' goal. G. W. Simmons recovers the ball and carries it the full length of the field, but misses goal. Mead of Miami gets the ball and carries it full length of the field, when E. H. Simmons takes it away. The ball is carried up and down the field several times in a horse race, finally

CHALLENGE OF WILSON ACCEPTED BY HARDING

Nominee Says Republican Party Welcomes Referendum on League Issue.

WASHINGTON, June 18.—President Wilson's challenge to submit a peace treaty to a referendum of the American people was accepted by Senator Harding, the Republican presidential candidate.

"I am sure," said Senator Harding, "the Republican party will fully welcome a referendum on the question of the foreign relationship of this republic and the Republic of the world. The Republican party is overwhelmingly endorsed."
Senator Harding's statement was made in reply to the interview with President Wilson, published today, in which the President discussed the League of Nations issue and the Republican platform.

Senator Harding, in his daily talk with newspaper men, referred briefly to his conference with Hoover.
He discussed the political situation extensively and I think with a great degree of satisfaction," he said.

Senator Harding also held a lengthy conference with Harry M.
Daugherty of Columbus, O., his campaign manager during the pre-convention campaign. They discussed plans for the official notification ceremonies and the general campaign.

Senator Harding has begun the preliminary work on his speech of acceptance and today he called in several persons to familiarize himself with various situations over the country. Among those who saw the Senator were Senator McNary, Republican, of Oregon, who was asked for information regarding reclamation and irrigation subjects, and John Barrett, former director of the Pan-American Union, who discussed Pan-American subjects briefly with the nominee.

died May 27, was filed in the Procluding $783 in cash. There also are six pieces of real estate in the city, and two pieces in St. Louis

COX'S STRENGTH IN OHIO; FACTORS THAT MAY HURT HARDING THERE

Democrats of State Solidly

HARDING'S AID TO BOSS COX RECALLED

Wood Fight Against Senator in Primary Aroused Animosities—Eight Big Industrial Centers in State Help Cox.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBUS, O., June 17.—Here in Columbus there is more Cox talk than Harding talk. That may be only because the Harding people, having achieved their aim, are resting, while the Cox forces are nearing the peak of their effort to make the Ohio Governor, the Democratic nominee, Ohio, moreover, has become so used to being the mother of presidents that it isn't to be expected she would be howlingly enthusiastic over the prospect of having another one.

The first outward and visible sign of Harding's candidacy noted by the writer on this trip into the center of Ohio by way of Cincinnati, was a large picture of the nominee, draped with a flag, in the lobby of the Desford Hotel at Columbus. In the same lobby was a picture of equal size of Gov. James M. Cox, also draped with a flag. No significance, of course, attaches to the 50-50 attitude of the hotel toward political rivals, but the pictures seemed to symbolize the closeness of the fight expected in Ohio by non-biased observers if the offering is Cox versus Harding. Naturally, the Harding folks say they will win in any event, and the Democrats asseverate to the contrary. With Cox, they say, the result would be certain. That is the point they emphasize, for the business of the Ohio Democrats just now is to beat McAdoo at San Francisco.

Solid Front for Gov. Cox.

They are not averse to indicating that the "Crown Prince" stuff would hurt the ticket. For the first time in many years Ohio is sending to a national convention a delegation solidly for one Ohio candidate. Senator Pomerene was in the race at one time, but got out in favor of Cox. In contrast with the solid front for Cox was the sharp fight between Wood Republicans and Harding Republicans in the primary and the national convention. Whatever Republicans may say in denial, that fight left soreness which has not been entirely healed.

Col. William C. Procter of Cincinnati, let loose a blast that plainly showed his irritation in defeat, and numerous other Republicans have expressed dissatisfaction with the outcome. Harding appeals to the conservative element, but he does not satisfy the Progressives. There are many such in Ohio, Republicans as well as Democrats, as attested by the showing made for Roosevelt in 1912. Ohio, furthermore, has been transformed in the last few years from a state purely agricultural into a swarming hive of industry, having in its borders eight cities of more than 100,000 population. The composite view of unprejudiced analysts of the Ohio situation is that the Republican disaffection except among labor will be erased by State pride if an outsider is nominated against Harding, but that Cox would be able to capitalize it to a degree dangerous to Republican chances.
Under no circumstances will labor swallow Harding. In large degree, the writer is informed, the Wood primary fight was not so much pro-Wood as anti-Harding, some of the clubs that were formed to aid the General being known as "anti-Harding Clubs." In Ohio there are approximately 3500 country voting precincts and 2500 city, with an average vote of about 40 each.
Harding ran ahead of Wood about five votes to the precinct in the country, and Wood had the same margin of advantage in the cities.
These figures are being quoted now to show the strength of the anti-Harding sentiment that could be turned to account by Cox.

Though Harry M. Daugherty was the original Harding man in Ohio and now gets the credit of having "put him over," the prevalent opinion here is that Daugherty's connection with the campaign as manager was one factor that enabled Wood to figure as a dangerous contender in the preferential primary. Daugherty leaps into the limelight as the maker of a presidential candidate from a comparatively obscure position in Ohio politics.

Daugherty Has Share of Enemies.
He is a Columbus lawyer, 62 years old. In the days of Mark Hanna, Daugherty twice ran for the Republican nomination for Governor, and was defeated. He was chairman of the Republican State Central Committee in 1912, the year of the party split. At one time in Columbus he was that recognized lobbyist for Ohio telephone and other interests.
Daugherty has made his full share of enemies who describe him as a nationalist and party disturber. He has long been at outs with the Hamilton County (Cincinnati) machine, and the truce patched up by Harding between him and Rudolph K.

Hyslicka, head of that machine and National Committeeman, was on the surface merely. It was partly because of dislike of Daugherty that the Cincinnati organization did not "go to bat" for Harding in the primary.

The attachment between Harding and Daugherty is of long standing.
It appears to be a deep and genuine friendship. The story is current that

Robert F. Wolf, publisher of two Columbus papers, offered Harding his support in the primary if he would throw down Daugherty. Harding declined, and Wolf supported Wood, who carried Columbus by a majority of 2000. Loyalty to his friends is given as one of Harding's dominant characteristics, and this episode is being cited in proof. Daugherty was beaten for delegate-at-large to the national convention. Harding, one learns in Ohio from members of both parties, is always with his party, never ahead of it. It is recalled that in 1912, at the Ohio State convention, Harding placed in nomination as the "big four" delegates to the national convention Charles Dick, Myron T. Herrick, Joseph B. Foraker and George B. Cox, the late boss of Cincinnati, repeatedly described during his lifetime as an exponent of the most vicious and unsavory methods of politics. Harding eulogized them all, and paid a special tribute to Cox as a grand old leader, to whom he offered "deference and devotion."

Charles P. Taft at that time was trying to read Cox out of the party.

This "deference and devotion" speech by Harding, the phrase illustrates, incidentally, his fondness for alliteration.

MAN STRUCK BY CAR A WEEK AGO DIES

S. H. Rutherford, 70, Was Hit
When Student Motorman
Was at Controller.

Samuel H. Rutherford, 70 years old, of 4737 Cote Brillante avenue, a coal dealer, died at the city hospital at 5 p. m. yesterday from a fractured skull suffered last Friday when struck in front of 4734 Easton avenue by a Wellston car on which a new motorman was being instructed by an experienced motorman.

At the time of the accident the regular motorman, Benjamin Bartell, 4269 Kennerly avenue, and Virgil Huggins, 1621 Olive street, the "green" motorman, who had charge of the car, were taken to the Deer

Street Station, where they made a statement and were released. Bartell said he saw Rutherford crossing the street and had Huggins sound the gong and put on the brakes. Rutherford, he said, apparently heard neither and walked directly onto the tracks ahead of the car. Bartell said he reached out the window and tried to grab Rutherford by the coat collar, but his grasp slipped and Rutherford was knocked to one side of the street.

WOUNDS OF BANKER SERIOUS

By the Associated Press.
CHICAGO, June 18.—Although relatives stated that the shooting was due to an accident, police are investigating what they termed mysterious angles connected with the wounding last Monday night of C. B. Ensign, 60 years old, was reported in a serious condition at the hospital.

One theory advanced by detectives was that Ensign had attempted to take his own life after a nervous breakdown. Ensign is suffering from two bullet wounds, both just below the heart.

AUTO SPEEDS AWAY AFTER STRIKING MAN

Speeding Car Knocks Man Several Feet, Seriously Injuring Him—Other Accidents.

Stephen Keleman, 45 years old, of 6232 Berthold avenue, a carpenter, was injured seriously when knocked several feet by a speeding automobile near Tower Grove and Chouteau avenues at 10 o'clock last night. The driver fled. Keleman had stepped into the street, witnesses said, to board a street car, when the machine, westbound in Chouteau avenue, struck him. He was taken to the City Hospital, where doctors said he had a fractured skull, fractured leg, and internal injuries.

An automobile that struck and seriously injured Samuel Grodsky, 9 years old, of 1508 Wash street, in front of that number at noon yesterday, sped away after the accident. The boy suffered a fractured skull. Police tracing a license number given them by witnesses arrested a farmer near Jefferson Barracks, but he was subsequently released when he satisfied the police that his machine had been in a repair shop for a week.

Henry T. Bussmann, 1505 Newhouse avenue, lost control of his automobile in front of 1121 Newhouse avenue at night when he took his hands from the steering wheel to brush a bug from his face. The machine swerved across the street and crashed into a wagon belonging to Albert Goerke, 4033 Penrose street, wrecking the wagon.

Miss Rachel Jochum, 16, of 5407 Penrose street, was internally injured when knocked down by a 3-ton truck in front of the home of her sister, Mrs. Everett Osborne, 5507 Tennyson square, at 5 p. m. Police were told she had climbed onto the truck and had released the brake, causing the truck to start down hill. She jumped off and was struck by the truck as it swerved.

COX'S STRENGTH IN OHIO AND HOW IT MAY HURT HARDING

tion, will figure against him in the coming campaign. It was said at the time and is repeated now that Harding, loyal party man that he is, was paying his debt to Cox for having swung the Republican nomination for Governor to him in 1910 when the State convention was in a deadlock.

Paper Attacked Roosevelt.
Progressives of the party will not be allowed to forget, either, that in the fight of 1912, Roosevelt was bitterly attacked in Harding's paper, the Marion Star, and Johnson was called a "blackguard." Harding's friends recall that he and Roosevelt later made their peace, and assert that the editorials were written by the acting editor of the paper, while Harding was on the stump, without Harding's knowledge.

The determining factor with Harding, say his critics, is his wish, the people want, but what the party wants, and in this connection his conception of senatorial duty is contrasted with that of his Democratic colleague, Senator Pomerene. Though regarded as an opponent of suffrage, when he was elected in 1914, and though the people of Ohio had rejected it by majorities of from 140,000 to 180,000, Harding voted to submit the constitutional amendment in 1918, after the State Republican convention had endorsed suffrage. Pomerene, though personally favoring suffrage, held that the mandate of the people of Ohio should be supreme.

Neither Cox nor Harding is wholly acceptable to the Anti-Slavery League, Cox because of his well known liberal views, and Harding because of alleged "trimming" on the question. Perley Baker, head of the league, which has national headquarters here and keeps an especially close eye on Ohio, declared that Harding voted "dry but talked wet." Democrats laugh at the assertion made to the writer by Congressman Nicholas Longworth in Cincinnati that Harding's defeat by Judson Harmon for Governor in 1910 by a majority of 100,000 was due to work by the liquor interests for Harmon. Harding's defeat that year was due, it is contended, to the fact that the progressive movement which reached its climax in 1915, had begun to set in, and the whole Republican machine was out of gear. Harmon, the records show, carried many rock-ribbed Republican counties that were dry under local option.

His Election to Senatorship.
When Harding came back in 1914 and was elected Senator over Timothy Hogan by 100,000, he was aided by the religious issue raised against Hogan, a Roman Catholic. Bigotry was rife that year, the old A. P. A. movement having taken on a new lease of life. To Harding's credit it is said that he had no hand in bringing religion into the campaign and publicly deplored the tactics used against Hogan.

Harding's speeches are virtually all attuned the same way. He appeals on partisan grounds for partisan votes, seldom to the independent voter. He is said to have made himself peculiarly obnoxious, politically, to Democratic voters. He does not, however, indulge in personal invective, and many of his political opponents like him personally. Gov. Cox, for instance, speaks highly of him, as a man of great personal charm.

TRIES TO CATCH CANARY BY PUTTING SALT ON TAIL

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 18.—A fugitive canary bird, weary of life in a wicker cage in a downtown bonbon shop, escaped and completely blocked traffic yesterday at Twelfth street and Baltimore avenue, in the downtown hotel district.

The bird flew to a hotel window ledge. The cashier of the bonbon shop sent a negro boy with the cage to get it. As the boy mounted to the top of the glass canopy overhanging the sidewalk, someone suggested that he throw salt on its tail. A waitress from a cafe threw a silver salt cellar. It grazed the bird's head, and the bird flew across the street to the ledge of a fifth-story hotel window.

By this time traffic was completely checked and members of the crowd were shouting advice to the boy about how to catch the canary.

A sparrow dove like a battle-plane and attacked the golden stranger. Much confused, the canary again took flight. It alighted on a telephone cable. A traffic policeman climbed to the top of a motor car, with the empty cage on the end of a window stick, and tried to lure the fugitive again. No use.

Again the negro boy tried his hand. He placed the open cage upon a window sill. The canary looked at it doubtfully. The war-like sparrow with another pirate of the same tribe, swooped down again. Nearer the cage hopped the perturbed canary, and a black hand shot out and clutched the golden feathers. It trusted the frightened songster to the cage and carried the cage to the bonbon shop. In 10 minutes a squad of policemen had started on its moving once more.

HOT WEATHER DOES NOT STOP FURNITURE BUYING

Tomorrow, Saturday, is a good day for June brides and their fiancés to inspect this special furniture offering. Hundreds of young people, after looking round at other stores, have returned and made their furniture purchases.

The Prufrock-Litton Furniture Company, at Fourth and St. Charles streets, have fitted up three special rooms—the living room, dining room and bedroom—with three handsome suites of furniture, on which they have made very special reductions. Last Saturday dozens of young people visited this store and most of them purchased. It was the busiest day this store has had for many months.

There is a reason for this, and it will give our salespeople pleasure to show you these wonderful furniture values tomorrow. The store is open until 5 p. m.

NEW LANDING FIELD TO BE BUILT IN COUNTY

Missouri Aeronautical Society Has Leased 160-Acre Tract on Natural Bridge Road.

The Missouri Aeronautical Society. It was announced today, has leased a 160-acre tract on Natural Bridge road near Brighton, St. Louis County, as a landing place for airplanes. This move is preliminary to a plan for establishing passenger airplane service between St. Louis and other cities.

The plan for the lease was worked out by W. B. Robertson of 4905 Argyle place, a former first lieutenant in the aviation service; his brother, Frank H. Robertson, and Randall Foster of 5650 Kingsbury avenue, with the co-operation of Albert Bond Lambert, pioneer promoter of aeronautics here.

The selection of a new landing place was determined on after it was decided that the Forest Park landing place, near Forest Park Highlands, selected by the Government for aerial mail, would not do for large passenger planes. The Forest Park site is too small and too closely hemmed in by buildings and wires, aviators say, to be a desirable place for landing with a large plane.

Will Offer to Government.

It is anticipated that the postal authorities may decide that a freer and more spacious landing place for mail planes is needed, and the Aeronautical Society will offer the use of the new field to the Postoffice Department.

The lease on the Bridgeton tract will be in effect as soon as the present crops on the fields have been harvested. The lease is for six years, at $2000 a year. It is planned to build hangars, for the present of the less expensive type of construction, also to establish service and repair stations. The field will be open to aircraft of all kinds, for whatever purpose used, and to all manufacturers and air transportation companies.

Near Electric Lines. The field is near the main line of the Wabash to Kansas City, and the St. Charles electric line runs near it. It is a 25-minute automobile ride from Webster. The Florissant road and the St. Charles road, as well as Natural Bridge road, lead to it.

The field is only three miles from the Missouri River, and this will facilitate co-operation with possible hydroplane transportation lines. Plans for such lines, to fly by water routes between St. Louis and Chicago, Kansas City and Memphis, are now being considered.

LOUISIANA SUFFRAGE BEATEN

Senate Opponents of Ratification Lose With State Measure.

By the Associated Press. BATON ROUGE, La., June 18.—Defeat in the Louisiana Senate yesterday of the House State's rights woman suffrage bill was followed by notice from leaders favoring ratification of the Federal suffrage amendment that they might re-introduce a ratification resolution.

The State's rights measure, which was supported by those who opposed ratification of the Susan B. Anthony amendment, failed to receive the necessary two-thirds vote in the Senate. Another bill has been introduced in the Senate, however, which would provide for woman suffrage by State constitutional amendment.

COLE ASKED TO CALL MEETING OF G. O. P. STATE COMMITTEE

Letter From Judge Reynolds Declares Situation by Republicans in State Is Alarming.

W. L. Cole, chairman of the Republican State Committee, was requested to call a meeting of that body, in a letter written to him yesterday by former Circuit Judge Matt G. Reynolds, chairman of a committee of 10 named at a meeting of about 40 Republicans at the Planters Hotel Monday.

The letter, which was written by Reynolds with the consent of four members of his committee, says nothing about campaign fund disclosures, nor does it convey any intimation that the resignations of any party officials are desired. The entire request of the "house cleaners" is expressed in one paragraph of the letter, as follows:

"The situation of the Republican party in the State is extremely alarming and unfortunate. The State Committee as the official organization of the Republicans of Missouri, owe it to themselves and the party and the people to call a meeting and invite those who are interested therein to appear and to give you such advice as to your future action as in their good judgment might seem wise. You understand as well as we the alarm in the State and the causes therefor."

4 ST. LOUISANS FINED $750 EACH FOR MADISON GAMBLING

Four St. Louis men, arrested two weeks ago for running a dice game in Madison, Ill., pleaded guilty today, in the Circuit Court at Edwardsville, to charges of operating a gambling house, and were fined $750 and costs each, a total of $3,000, which they paid. They are Jeff Simmons, Frank Bunyan, Tony O'Rourke and Dan Haulbee. Two others who were arrested, but who will contest their cases, are Lige Riddle and George Smith.

The game at Madison was said to have a nightly turnover of more than $10,000.

SOLDIERS OUT OF CAMP TO BE QUESTIONED IN ILLINOIS KILLING

ROCKFORD, Ill., June 8.—Soldiers in various cities of Illinois, Iowa and Wisconsin will be questioned in a drastic step to apprehend the slayer of Mrs. Leroy H. Most, wife of Capt. Moss, who was shot and killed while riding with friends near here Tuesday night.

Authorities in various cities of the three states were instructed by Camp Grant officers yesterday to question all soldiers found in their districts and if they are found to belong to Camp Grant division to hold them until verification of their passes or of their claim of the right to be absent from camp can be verified by camp authorities.

By a system of elimination in which the name and organization of each man questioned will be sent to camp officers it is hoped to run down the murderer.

Camp officers stated that arrests were momentarily expected, and that it was believed a net had been woven around the slayer from which it would be impossible for him to escape.

MISSOURIAN PROBABLY FIRST HARDING MAN

E. M. Reilly of Kansas City Advocated Nomination of Ohigan Since January, 1919.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 18.—The sudden rise to political influence in Missouri of E. Mont Reilly of Kansas City, Western manager for Senator Harding, Republican nominee for President, is attracting State-wide attention. Reilly, who, for years, has hovered upon the outskirts of the Republican organization in Missouri, watching Walter S. Dickey, Thomas J. Akins and others distribute patronage and hold the presidential ear in Missouri affairs, has now "come into his own."

He lays claim to being the "original Harding man in the United States," and there are a number of facts to bear out his claim. The politicians expect him to be the Missourian closest to Harding if he is elected President, and they are considering plans by which they can edge him out of the lime light.

Harding Reilly's Guest.
When Harding was in Kansas City recently he was a guest at Reilly's home for several days, and made Reilly his Western manager.

Reilly was largely instrumental in causing Harding to enter the presidential race. Reilly had been an ardent admirer of Roosevelt. He organized here the Roosevelt Club, No. 1, of the United States in 1900, when the Colonel was in the vice presidency.

Jan. 17, 1919, 10 days after Roosevelt's death, Reilly wrote an open letter. He called it an "elimination letter." The purpose was to show that the Ohio Senator was the logical Republican candidate for President. The letter was printed in many newspapers.

At that time Harding was giving more thought to his re-election as United States Senator than to the presidency. Following publication of the Reilly letter, Harding received many inquiries as to his intentions of running for President. Harding told friends he was not entirely pleased at the dilemma forced on him by the Reilly letter. Later Harding became a candidate for the Republican nomination. Reilly visited him at Washington several times, and subsequently was made his Southwestern manager.

Worked at Chicago.
At the Chicago convention Reilly was in and about the Harding headquarters and on the floor of convention urging Harding.

"He is going to be nominated. No question about it," Reilly said last Friday, when the Harding chances were at low tide. Reilly has only one regret as a result of the Chicago convention. His overcoat was stolen from the Harding headquarters at the Congress Hotel. In a pocket was a badly worn letter written by Roosevelt within 30 days before his death concerning the Colonel's desire to be a presidential candidate in 1920.

"I am delighted. I have one friend who never makes a mistake," the letter said.

Reilly has attained his present position in Republican politics by perseverance and luck. His local influence heretofore has not been large. He was secretary to Mayor James Jones, 24 years ago, and later Deputy County Assessor. On Reilly's recommendation Joseph H. Harris was appointed postmaster here by Roosevelt and Reilly was made assistant postmaster. When Taft took office, Reilly lost out. In 1912 Reilly urged Roosevelt not to leave the Republican party, but when he did, Reilly went over to the Bull Moose. In 1914 Reilly urged Roosevelt to return to the G. O. P. Roosevelt did not, and a break then occurred, as Reilly decided to go back to the Republican party. But later they made up.

Met Roosevelt Abroad.
When Roosevelt returned from his African hunt, Reilly met him in Naples and accompanied the Colonel home.

"I predicted Harding's nomination 18 months ago and I now predict he will carry Missouri, Oklahoma, Kansas, Tennessee and West Virginia," Reilly said today. But Reilly has one blemish on his record as a good guesser. Last January at Moberly Reilly offered to bet a Kansas City woman Harding would be nominated on the fifth ballot and he was not nominated until the tenth.

HUGHES' ATTEMPT TO STAY FINE FOR PROFITEERING OPPOSED

Assistant to Attorney-General Says Retailers Will Increase Prices if Such Action Is Taken.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Armin W. Riley, special assistant to the United States Attorney-General, announced last night that he will go to Canton, O., Saturday and oppose the reported attempt of Charles E. Hughes to obtain an order from Justice William R. Day of the United States Supreme Court staying execution of judgment in the case of C. R. Weed & Co., Buffalo retail clothing store, recently convicted of profiteering and fined $31,000. Riley said that if the order was obtained it would automatically stay all proceedings under the Lever act until the Supreme Court had an opportunity to pass on its constitutionality. Hughes, when informed of Riley's statement, declined to make any comment.

Riley expressed the opinion that should execution be stayed in the Weed case, many retailers of all classes would take immediate advantage of it and increase their prices. Riley cited a recent meeting of New York retail shoe dealers at which, he said, "it was openly admitted that prior to the enforcement of the Lever act, they received as high as 100 per cent profit on shoes, and that their only curtailment on such profits was directly due to the amendment to the Lever act putting a penalty on practices violating the same."

HARDING DECLINES TO DISCUSS PROHIBITION AT THIS TIME

National Dry Committee Receives No Reply to Telegram to Gov. Coolidge.

By the Associated Press. CHICAGO, June 18.—Senator W. G. Harding and Gov. Calvin Coolidge, nominees of the Republican National convention, have been asked to state their stand on prohibition, according to announcement last night by Virgil G. Hinshaw, chairman of the Prohibition National Committee. A telegram, he said, was sent to each yesterday reading as follows:

"Do you favor increasing the percentage of alcoholic content beyond one-half of one per cent in definition of intoxicating liquors now on Federal statute books?"

Hinshaw added that Senator Harding's secretary in reply, had wired that the Senator "declines to discuss any issue until he makes his formal acceptance in July."

No answer has been received from Gov. Coolidge.

BOSTON, June 18.—Gov. Coolidge, Republican candidate for Vice President, sent a letter today to Virgil G. Hinshaw, chairman of the Prohibition National Committee, acknowledging the telegram.

THE SUBTLE SATISFACTION of WELL-MADE SUMMER CLOTHES

It's evident in the pride, as well as in the comfort of men who wear these splendidly tailored C. L. & B. Suits.

Lines as shapely as those of a high grade worsted—patterns that present pleasing variety and smart distinction—with little touches of finish and trim that make for individuality.

Never heard of such a thing in a Palm Beach, a Mohair or a Breeze? Then, man you've a treat in store for you!

And—while these C. L. & B. models cost a trifle more than ordinarily made Summer Suits—they're rich in satisfaction, and economical in the long run.

CLUB WOMEN DISCUSS AMERICANISM IN ARTS

Further Revision of Federation's Bylaws Also Considered at Des Moines Convention.

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., June 18.—Further revision of the by-laws of the General Federation of Women's Clubs was discussed yesterday at the biennial convention. Proposed reorganization of the Federation was rejected late yesterday.

In addition to the continued consideration of revision, the war victory commission reports were read today, and members of the "overseas unit" introduced to the delegates. Reports of departments of art, music and civics also were made at separate conferences. At the art conference it was announced that free leaflets on art will be distributed to all asking them. It also was said that arrangements had been made for any club woman in the United States to get advice on home decorating.

Americanism was the central theme of the addresses at each department meeting, the subjects being discussed from an American standpoint almost entirely.

At the music conference among the speakers was Mrs. Max Oberndorfer of Chicago, on "Americanization Through Music." Since coming to Des Moines for the convention, Mrs. Oberndorfer has characterized the popular music of the day as "unjustifiable" and asserted that "90 per cent of it would not be allowed to go through the mails; if it were literature." She says that America stands at the threshold of a golden age, that the country is to be supreme artistically and music will be among the first of the arts to be nationalized.

Among the exhibits in connection with biennial which is attracting much attention, is that of kindergarten work, under the direction of the kindergarten section of the department of education of the convention, of which Mrs. A. B. Griffin of Dallas, Tex., is chairman. The exhibit is arranged to show Americanization work through the kindergarten. It displays the work of the normal and subnormal child. As well as handicapped children. Thousands of pieces of literature are being distributed to the delegates. There will be reports and discussions of the kindergarten work Saturday. Miss Julia Wade Abbott, representing the United States Bureau of Education, being one of the speakers.

DIRECTOR OF PSYCHICAL RESEARCH, LONG ILL, DIES

James Hervey Hyslop Was Secretary of American Society for Psychical Research.

NEW YORK, June 18.—James Hervey Hyslop, secretary and director of research of the American Society for Psychical Research, died yesterday after a long illness in Upper Montclair, N. J. It was announced here last night. Death was due to thrombosis.

Born in Xenia, O., Aug. 18, 1854, Dr. Hyslop graduated from Wooster College, studied two years at the University of Leipzig and later at Johns Hopkins. He was successively professor of philosophy at Lake Forest University, Smith College and Bucknell University, then of office and psychology at Columbia University, and later professor of logic and ethics at the same institution.

Suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, he resigned from Columbia in 1902 and spent the next two years in the Adirondacks. He was author of a score of other philosophical and psychological works.

Having long been interested in psychical phenomena, Dr. Hyslop in 1907 raised an endowment fund of $175,000 for the re-establishment of the American Society of Psychical Research, which had dissolved following the death of its secretary. In a biographical sketch issued by the society, Dr. Hyslop is described as "formerly a materialist and agnostic" who became "convinced that demonstrative evidence of the continuance of human life after bodily death exists."

He is survived by a son and two daughters.

FIELD MARSHAL WILSON SAYS ALLIES DIDN'T FIGHT TO END WAR

Declares Peace Has Not Come, That 20 or 30 Big and Little Wars Are Going On.

LONDON, June 17.—What was called a "straight talk" was given at the annual meeting of the Union Jack Club by Field Marshal Sir Henry Wilson, who described himself as "an old soldier who knows what he is talking about."

"We have been told," he said, "that we went into the war to end war. We did not. We went into it to save our skins. We were told that after the war we would have peace, but we have not got it. There are at present between 20 and 30 wars, big and little, going on. We were told that the war should end war, but it did not and could not."

"We are living in ticklish and dangerous times, and our command on sea, on land, and in the air is being challenged in various parts of the world."

IMPROVEMENTS AT CITY HOSPITAL URGED

Manager in Annual Report Recommends New Quarters for Observation and Prisoner Patients.

Dr. Rolla Henry, manager of the city hospital, in his report for the fiscal year ending last April 12, recommends that the present observation ward at the hospital be abolished as inadequate, and that Building A of the hospital group, now occupied by negroes, be remodeled and equipped for use as an observation ward.

The present observation room, he said, is used not only for the treatment of mental cases, but also as a prisoners' ward, for which it is not suitable. He also recommends that a better class of help be employed in this department at higher wages than the present scale.

Morale Endangered.
He says the fact that certain employees in the early part of the year presented grievances about wages and working conditions to the press, instead of taking the matter up with the hospital officials, endangered the morale and discipline of the institution, and made it difficult for the officials to maintain a conciliatory spirit. Some hospital attaches joined the Municipal Employees' Union and succeeded in getting increased wages.

The number of patients admitted to the hospital during the year was 13,031, as compared with 17,685 the previous year. Expenditures for the year amounted to $489,897.29, as compared with $434,878.39 in the previous year. The per capita cost of caring for patients last year was $17.74 a day, as compared with $1.67 in the previous year.

There were 1522 deaths at the hospital last year, 421 of which occurred within 48 hours after the patients were admitted. The average number of patients per day in the last year were 555.25.

716 Alcoholism Cases.
There were 716 cases of alcoholism treated in the past year, and 1424 the year before. There were 461 cases of tuberculosis, 288 poison cases, 645 cases of influenza and 2700 operations.
Lack of pupils in the nurses' training department is deplored. Dr. Henry suggesting that the city should advertise for pupils and endeavor to promote the establishment of more training schools, so that there will be no danger of a shortage in nurses. The Social Service Department reported 3495 visits to homes of patients, and distribution of clothing to 2437 patients.

AMERICAN OPTOMETRISTS END CONVENTION HERE

Launch Movement to Have Eye Specialists Placed on Boards of Education.

The American Optometric Association, whose twenty-third annual convention closed at noon today, will meet next year in Louisville. The exact date of the 1921 convention will be fixed later by the committee. R. C. Augustine, of Decatur, Ill., president, speaking at the closing session at the Planters Hotel on "Conservation of the Sight of the Youth," said: "We have not adapted ourselves to dwelling houses, and wherever we go we see the softening effects of our so-called civilized life. Our resistance to disease is steadily declining. Of the 20,000,000 children in our public schools more than half are in need of dental work and one-third have defective vision."

"Thousands of young folk quit school annually because their defective vision renders it impossible for them to go further. Many become loafers instead of lifters. "Then eye strain frequently causes other physical disturbances and works great mischief with the general health. It is one of the five great causes of nerve exhaustion, a prevailing American ailment. We Americans are prone to doctor effects instead of removing causes. But optometrists believe in searching out the cause. In our practice we often find that by relieving eye strain case disappears disease."

The association has decided to begin a movement to have an optometrist placed on each Board of Education in the United States to the end that the eyes of all children will be examined and defects in vision corrected. Optometrists already have been placed on the boards in many of the large Canadian cities.

GOMPERS NAMED A. F. L. PRESIDENT FOR 39TH TERM

Duncan of Seattle Only Delegate Recorded as Voting Against Veteran Federation Chief.

By the Associated Press.
MONTREAL, June 18.—Samuel Gompers, veteran president of the American Federation of Labor, was re-elected for the thirty-ninth time by the convention here today. James Duncan of Seattle, Wash., was recorded as casting the only negative vote.

Gompers' nomination by George W. Perkins of the Cigarmakers' Union was the signal for a prolonged ovation by the delegates, who stood and cheered for several minutes.

Other officers re-elected included: James Duncan of Quincy, Mass., first vice president; Joseph F. Valentine of Cincinnati, second vice president; Frank Duffy of Indianapolis, third vice president; and William Green of Coshocton, O., fourth vice president.

The fourth Sunday in May of each year was designated as Labor's Memorial day, upon which labor throughout the country will be called upon to pay a tribute to the memory of its dead. The churches also will be called upon to co-operate in the observance of Labor Sunday, the day preceding Labor day, in September.

The federation today authorized a nation-wide campaign to organize all the telephone operators. State federations, city central bodies and volunteer organizers are to take the field at once in the campaign. The convention declared its action was necessary because of the "oppressive anti-labor policy of the Bell Telephone Co. and its associated companies."

Reconsidering its action yesterday in amending its constitution to increase the executive council from 11 to 15 members, the convention rejected the amendment by a vote of 23,927 to 13,841. This action prevents the election of four additional vice presidents.

Gompers faced a second critical issue threatening his power today, when the convention came to consideration of its position regarding the League of Nations. He was overwhelmingly defeated in yesterday's session when the federation voted for Government ownership of the railroads.

The Committee on International Relations was scheduled to make its report today, which will call upon the convention to demand that the United States Senate ratify the league without reservations. This is in accordance with President Gompers' position.

The Irish sympathizers, supported by other elements, however, are determined to prevent this action on the grounds that the covenant cannot be approved by organized labor as long as it denies the Irish people the right of self-determination. They claim sufficient support to overthrow the administration report.

Gompers' Defeat Decisive.
The federation's endorsement of Government ownership of the railroads was declared by labor leaders to have been the first genuine defeat Samuel Gompers, its veteran president, has suffered in years. The final vote was 29,059 for Government ownership and 8249 against.

Despite the protest and desires of Gompers, the convention increased his salary as president from $10,000 to $12,000 a year.

In appealing to the delegates not to give him an increase Gompers declared that "$10,000 is all sufficient for a man living in the ordinary modes of life to satisfy him and his needs."

Other Salary Increases.
The salary of Secretary Frank Morrison also was increased from $7500 to $10,000 a year. Organizers' wages were increased from $48 to $60 per week and their traveling allowance from $6 to $8 per day. This was declared necessary owing to the high cost of living.

Military training in the schools was condemned as "the first steps in the development of mechanical and unquestioning obedience which results in the killing of initiative." Compulsory military training also was declared "unnecessary, undesirable and un-American."

WILLIAM H. THOMSON, BANKER, WHO IS 83, IS NEAR DEATH

William H. Thomson, 83 years old, vice president of the Boatmen's Bank, is near death at his home, 3805 Lindell boulevard. Dr. O. H. Campbell, who is attending him, said this afternoon that hope for his recovery had been abandoned. His condition is attributed to the infirmities of age.

Thomson has been blind for more than a year, and for a month his health has failed steadily. He is a native of Maryland, and came to St. Louis as a young man, entering the service of the Boatmen's Bank on his twentieth birthday, in 1857. He has been connected with the bank ever since, and was active in its affairs until a few years ago. His family consists of Mrs. Thomson, one son and six daughters, four of whom are married. He was one of the organizers of Trinity Episcopal Church, and was its senior warden for many years.

Fined for Plain Lenses.

To Remove First Signs of Old Age

"The inflexible first sign of age is the sagging cheek muscles," says Mrs. Cavallieri, whose fame as a beauty culturist is scarcely less than that of a songstress. "These are more difficult and serious to treat than wrinkles," she continues. "The sagging muscles indicate they have grown too weak to remain in place; they must be assisted, strengthened." The best way to strengthen them is by bathing the face in a simple lotion made by dissolving an ounce of pure powdered ascorbic acid in a half pint of witch hazel. This creates a free circulation to the parts, besides causing muscles and skin to contract. Ascorbic acid is procurable at every drug store, has long been known by complexion specialists to possess remarkable tonic and astringent properties, valuable in treating flabby tissue and wrinkles.

COLE VISIT VOLUNTARY, SAYS HARDING MANAGER

H. M. Daugherty Gives Details of Return of $650 by Missouri Chairman.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
COLUMBUS, O., June 18.—W. L. Cole, chairman of the Missouri Republican Committee, who received $1250 of Harding money, called on Harry M. Daugherty, manager of the Harding campaign, here yesterday. Daugherty later issued his statement that Cole had returned to him $650, that being the amount he had on hand after paying the expenses of the work he undertook for Harding in Missouri.

"Cole came here voluntarily," said Daugherty, "because I had no time at Chicago to take the matter up with him."

"Mr. Cole's conduct in connection with accepting the check and the expenditure he made in connection with this investigation, were perfectly proper," said Daugherty. "I told him at that time that if he needed any additional money for this purpose I would be glad to furnish it. He never called upon me for any more. He did not make a statement or return any of the money in his hands because I had an understanding with him that when Senator Harding made his trip West on a speaking tour, I would accompany the Senator and see him in St. Louis."

"There has been no opportunity for Mr. Cole to see me personally in the meantime. I testified before the committee in Washington practically—though perhaps not in detail—what I am stating here. Missouri finally supported Senator Harding naturally and no delegate from Missouri ever suggested anything improper. There were no promises made or asked. Missouri came to our support as naturally as I confidently expected it would. If Gov. Lowden could not be nominated, 'I was always satisfied to have Missouri friendly to Senator Harding as a second choice, I was satisfied with what the Missouri delegation did. There were no negotiations and there should be no reflection as far as Senator Harding's candidacy is concerned, or anybody in Missouri, in connection with the support we received."

"As far as Mr. Cole is concerned or anybody else in Missouri, there is nothing in connection with this transaction, or any other transaction connected with the support of Senator Harding, that reflects upon his integrity in the slightest degree."

HAY FOR PEACE TREATY, AGAINST ANY WET PLANK

Candidate Formally Opens Campaign for U. S. Senatorship in Old Barroom.

Charles M. Hay, in formally opening his campaign for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in his headquarters in a former barroom of the Planters Hotel this afternoon, announced as the principal issues of his campaign ratification of the peace treaty without reservations or with only reservations which would not nullify its purposes, and opposition to any measures seeking to permit the sale of intoxicating liquor.

Hay said that the entry of Henry S. Priest and himself into the race for Senator had served to present the league issue squarely to the people. Priest being against any league and Hay being for the present covenant.

Hay said the Supreme Court had upheld the prohibition amendment and that neither Congress nor the Legislature of any state had the power to enact any legislation which would permit the sale of intoxicating liquor, "whether called 'light wine and beer' or 'strong whiskey.'" He suggested a proposal to repeal the amendment as the only above-board way for those desiring to defeat prohibition to proceed.

Sixty-one men and 19 women were present when Hay began to speak after an introductory speech by Sub-treasurer W. D. Vandiver. A large punchbowl "decorated the mahogany" of the old bar, and Mrs. John Estes Jr. and Mrs. Ross H. Schachtner served "kickless" punch after the addresses had been made.

NEGRO NAMED FOR GOVERNOR OF ARKANSAS OWNS 600 ACRES

FORREST CITY, Ark., June 17.—J. H. Blount, who is the first negro to be nominated for Governor of Arkansas, received his nomination at the hands of a faction of the Republican party in this State. Blount is about 60 years old and has resided in this city for 47 years.

He is principal of the negro schools of Helena and has been connected with schools in several Arkansas towns, including Hot Springs, Texarkana and Forrest City.

Blount is said to be in independent financial circumstances, owning more than 600 acres of farm land, and teaches merely for the love of the work. He is active in many fraternal orders.

TRUCK BURGLARS ROB STORE OF $1475 IN DRY GOODS

Replace Padlock With Another After Forcing Front Door Looting South Fourth Street Place.

"Truck burglars" who looted the dry goods store of John Saffa, 637 South Fourth street, early today, taking goods valued at $1475, furnished their own padlock to lock the front door after they had broken the padlock that had been placed there by Saffa.

After fastening the front door, apparently to throw off suspicion, they opened a side door from the inside and carried out 200 shirt waists and 90 shirts. Saffa, on visiting the store at 7 a. m. today, found himself locked out and called the police. They discovered the side door insecure and let him in that way. The padlock left by the burglars was taken in charge by the police.

Daniel Saffa, a brother, of 300 South Fourth street told the police he passed the place at midnight and tried the front door. It was locked then, but he could not say whether with the burglars' or the store padlock.

BRIDGE COMMISSION DISCUSSES ARBITRARY

Mayor Says Effort Should Be Made to Have Free Bridge Operated as People Intended.

A meeting of the Municipal Bridge Commission was held at the City Hall today to discuss plans for putting the Free Bridge to use. Mayor Kiel referred to the recent decision of the Interstate Commerce Commission upholding the 20-cent-a-ton coal arbitrary, and said that every effort should be made to operate the bridge as the people originally intended it should be operated. He said it was a shame to let a $6,000,- 000 bridge lie idle.

City Counselor Duques said that in his opinion the Interstate Commerce Commission's decision applied only to the charges made by the Terminal for its switching and delivery service and not to bridge tolls. He said he believed that under a Federal act of 1916 an appeal could be made to the Secretary of War if any controversy should arise as to tolls over the Free Bridge.

Frank H. Gerhart agreed with this view and said the next step should be to get the railroad executives together and tell them they must treat
St. Louis fairly. If this warning should not be heeded, he said, an appeal should be made to Attorney-General Palmer to institute proceedings to dissolve the Terminal Association.

MAN SUES REALTY AGENT WHEN ROOMING HOUSE IS BARRED

M. T. Shaffer Asks for $2700, Alleging He Was Not Told of Restriction in Vandeventer Place.

A suit of M. T. Shaffer for cancellation of a lease on the residence at 12 Vandeventer place, which, Shaffer alleges, was executed by him upon statement of Charles E. Bradley, a real estate agent, that he could conduct a rooming house in the residence, was continued until Tuesday in Judge Calhoun's Court today. The restrictions governing Vandeventer place forbid rooming houses.

Shaffer declares in his suit that he agreed to pay $125 a month rental for the residence beginning April 20 last, but after moving into the residence with his family he was notified by the trustees of Vandeventer place not to operate a rooming house. He asks that Bradley be enjoined from evicting him for non-payment of rent until he can find suitable location, asks that Bradley pay him $2500, which he estimates would have been his profit for the year if he had conducted the rooming house, and in addition, wants $200 damages.

Bradley, in his answer, denies that he had told Shaffer that he could run a rooming house in the residence.

G. T. PRIEST RESIGNS AS BLUEBIRD RECEIVER ATTORNEY

"For Personal Reasons" Only Motive Assigned—Head of Selling Agency, of Company Quite.

George T. Priest today filed with Circuit Judge Calhoun his resignation as one of the attorneys for the receivers of the Bluebird Manufacturing Co., which went into receivership May 25. The other attorneys for the receivers are Leo S. Rassier and W. H. Schaumburg.

Priest did not assign any motive for his resignation except that it was "for personal reasons." He had been known today that F. E. Hazard had resigned as president

TAFT SAYS AMERICA CANNOT ESCAPE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, June 18.—Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador, and former President William Howard Taft were speakers last night at a dinner of the Maryland branch of the English-Speaking Union.

Taft assured the audience America could not escape the League of Nations and that the league would be adopted after the "obscuring lights" of the election had been dimmed.

He also brought the audience to its feet when he said that America must not interfere with British domestic affairs, although he did not directly mention the Irish question.
"We must do to Great Britain as we would have Great Britain do to us," he said.

James Manion, Midland Valley, defeated Hugh Brann, Hillcrest, 4 up and 3.

Decker and Brann were from Kansas City.
The semifinals were begun at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the final, over 56 holes, is scheduled for tomorrow.

Wolff Wins Uphill Match.
The Wolff-Decker match had the morning gallery and the enthusiasts who followed it were rewarded with a surprise on the part of Wolff, who pulled out of a losing start and converted it into a winner.

Wolff did not win a hole until No. 9, at which point he was one down. He squared the match on No. 15 green and went into the lead on No. 16, sinking a 12-foot putt, while his foe missed one of the same length. On No. 17 green Wolff holed a 15-foot putt and won the match.

Both men had good medal scores. Wolff getting a 38 going out, while Decker had a 36. The cards follow:
Wolff..... 3 3 4 5 4 4 5 2-38
Decker..... 3 3 4 4 4 4 5 4-36

Midland Valley Favored.
The pairings saw two Midland Valley players enter the semifinals Bockenkamp and Manion, with the M-V rout, wagering odds that one of the representatives would win the title.

Wolff and Bockenkamp attracted the most attention and the side lines were heavily freighted with green backs wagered on the result. Wolff was a slight favorite on the strength of his uphill victory over Decker.

Other morning round results were:

ATLANTA CLUB LOCKS GATES, REFUSES TO PLAY AGAINST LITTLE ROCK

ATLANTA, Ga., June 18.—When members of the Little Rock baseball team arrived at Ponce de Leon Park yesterday for the scheduled game with Atlanta, they found the gates locked. The management of the Atlanta club, together with officials of the Mobile and Chattanooga teams of the Southern Association, announced earlier in the day that no games would be played with Little Rock as long as Casey Smith and Tom Seaton, formerly of the San Francisco (Pacific Coast League) club appeared with Little Rock.

The two players, against whom protests have been made to Southern Association officials, were signed by Little Rock after they had been released by San Francisco for alleged unsportsmanlike conduct. The Little Rock manager had announced that Smith would appear in the pitcher's box yesterday.

Umpires Kerin and Roth, who appeared at the park with the Little Rock players, announced that the game would stand as "not played" instead of being forfeited to Little Rock. The umpires ruled that both teams must be on the ground to have the game forfeited.

Carpentier Wires Consent to Spar Exhibition, Here

Tom Ward, Navy Club, Expects to Stage Show in St. Louis Giants' Park, June 28.

Tom Ward, matchmaker for the Navy Athletic Club, announced this morning that he had received a telegram from Jack Curley and French Champion Georges Carpentier, at Tulsa, Ok., accepting an offer to exhibit the European boxer here on Monday night, June 28. Ward of the Navy Club, expects to stage a show in St. Louis Giants' Park, June 28.

According to Ward, he wired again to Curley, at Memphis, where Carpentier is now, asking if he would accept a local opponent for the exhibition here or if Carpentier is desiring his own mate. As yet no reply to the second message has been received.

Ward stated that the only park he was able to obtain for the occasion was the St. Louis Giants' baseball park, at 6000 North Broadway. This park is admirably fitted up and, Ward says, readily can be adapted to an outdoor exhibition. It is the home park of a negro baseball club known as the St. Louis Giants. This park can be reached by the Broadway, Grand avenue and Sarah street car lines, and is in a few minutes' auto ride from Grand and Olive.

Ward stated that he would provide a suitable card aside from the Carpentier act, go entertain spectators, the program to be announced later.

Dempsey Becoming Impatient. Carpentier is barnstorming his way through the country at present, exhibiting at so much per night. He attracted a large crowd at Kansas City, Mo., where he sparred with the "champion of Belgium," and made a great impression.

Carpentier, two days ago, challenged Jack Dempsey to battle for the world's championship—a "defi" that was promptly accepted. Dempsey, in taking up the gauntlet, stated that he was ready to fight within two weeks. He countered with a statement that he would wait a few days for Carpentier to agree to meet him soon, the event to take place between the present time and Labor Day. Dempsey's manager said that if Carpentier failed to accept this proposal, Dempsey would start a new campaign against American heavyweights.

Carpentier has announced that he would return to New York and sail for France July 10, returning in time to oppose Battling Levinsky on Oct. 10.

Kearns, in hurrying Carpentier into a bout, apparently fears that the Frenchman will be lost forever if he opposes Levinsky, and that a $500,000 purse will thus be tossed away.

U.S. Tennis Stars To Meet in Final For British Title

Tilden and Johnston Win Semi-final Matches in London Tourney Today.

LONDON, June 18.—William T. Tilden of Philadelphia beat Zeno Shimidzu of Japan, 6-1, 6-1, and William M. Johnston of San Francisco, United States singles champion, defeated Maj. Dudley, 6-2, 6-3, in the semi-finals of the London Lawn Tennis Championship Tournament here today.

By these victories America has already won the singles championship.

It only remains to be seen whether Johnston or Tilden is the better man in the final tomorrow.

In the fourth round of the doubles Shimidzu and Nicholas Mishu of Rumania beat the American player, Capt. Samuel Hardy and Blackbeard of South Africa, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

Tilden and Johnston, in defeating Shimidzu and Dudley, furnished the most sensational tennis yet witnessed in the championship. The Americans toyed with their opponents, both of whom were considered crack players, especially the Japanese.

Americans Win in Doubles. The outcome of the semi-finals in the doubles made it certain that an American pair also would win the doubles championship. In this event, R. Norris Williams and C. S. Garland beat Shimidzu and Mishu, 6-2, 6-2, while Johnston and Tilden beat the British semi-finalists, Ritchie and Fisher, 6-2, 6-0.

In the ladies' doubles, Mrs. Craddock and Miss Marriott beat Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory and Mrs. O'Neill, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0.

By Herbert L. Bourke. (Copyright, 1920.)

LONDON, June 18.—Your champion, William M. Johnston, went out to avenge the defeat of Williams at the Queens Club yesterday, in the fifth round for the championship of London, and in defeating M. J. G. Ritchie at 6-2, 6-2, he made a profound impression.

I can now understand why he beat Gerald R. Patterson in America last year, and if he can play as he did on the rough and soft court yesterday, his possibilities under good conditions must be immense.

As rain had fallen Johnston, like a wise man, played with spiked shoes and he was always sure of his foothold. After a cautious start, he beat his man with speed and severity and moreover was a commanding personality despite the fact that Ritchie played extremely well.

I like the way Johnston glues his eyes to the ball and his fine concentration. He served with convincing swiftness and sureness of placing, but most remarkable was his low volleying.

He caught Ritchie's dipping drives well below the top of the net, where most players would have been glad to make the return any old way, and made winning shots of them.

Johnston is young, but his game has matured, and yesterday he controlled all his strokes perfectly.

Tilden Wins "Slogging" Match. Tilden also qualified for the semi-final round and appears to have something in hand against B. I. C. Norton, the young South African. The American won by a score of 6-3, 7-5. The second set was stopped by rain, and on resuming, both players went in for exhilarating slogging, to the great delight of the crowd. Norton took off his shoes and finished the match in his socks.

There seems to be no anxiety as to Johnston and Tilden having found their stride, but Williams and Garland are not quite happy over their present showing. Johnston is prominent because his game is more compact and safer all around than Tilden's. I want to see Tilden put to the big test; but my present opinion is that American could not do better than play Johnston and Tilden in both singles and doubles in the Davis Cup ties with France.

JUNIOR MARATHON TO BE OVER SHORTENED COURSE. William Valentine, 1107 Hebert street, one of the trophy winners from last year's Junior Marathon, has signed up for this year, and will start with the rest of the field on the afternoon of July 1 in the annual run for the Tuberculosis Society's trophy.

At the meeting of the Marathon Committee yesterday afternoon it was decided to shorten the course for this year's run. Instead of starting from Moulshill, it will be from the Central High School, Grand and Finney avenues. This will shorten the course to about a mile and a quarter, and will be much better for the younger boys in the race, it is thought.

CUP TRIALS AGAIN OFF. NEWPORT, R. I., June 18.—For the third successive day weather conditions forced postponement of the ninth race between the Visculute and Vinitie for the right to defend the America's Cup against Shamrock IV next month.

Giants After Johnson. SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, June 18.—The New York Nationals are negotiating for the services of Ernest Johnson, manager and shortstop of the Salt Lake club of the Pacific Coast League. It became known here last night. Johnson is second in hitting with .364 and is regarded as one of the best infielders in the coast league. He came to Salt Lake from the St. Louis Americans last season.

Red Sox Release Devine. BOSTON, June 18.—Manager Ed Barrow of the Boston Americans announced in a telegram received here last night that he had released on option Catcher Joe Devine to Toronto and Outfielder Robert Hunter to Indianapolis. He also said that he had signed Paul Krichell to coach the pitchers.

Lewis of Chicago tied for first place yesterday for the Illinois State championship at double targets, the chief event of the opening day of the first annual trapshooting tourney of the Illinois State Sportsmen's Association.

Both turned in scores of 73. The shoot-off will take place today. G. A. Smith of Marshalltown, Ia., turned in a score of 87 in this event, but because of his non-residence it did not count.

American Owner Victor. LONDON, June 18.—The Olympia Horse Show attracted a large attendance last night to witness the driving and jumping competitions. George Watts of New Jersey took first prize in Class 2 for trotters, with Garry Owen, and third prize in the same event, with his mare Yankee Girl.

Ruth Has 98 Contests To Clout 11 Home Runs To Beat His 1919 Mark

GEORGE "BABE" RUTH, the $125,000 slugger of the New York Yankees, has 98 games in which he needs only 11 home runs to beat the record of 29 hung up by himself in 1919, while a member of the Boston Red Sox. Ruth yesterday rapped out his 19th circuit wallop against Claude Williams, star southpaw of the Chicago White Sox.

Ruth's drive against Williams at Chicago yesterday, his second in as many days, came in the fourth inning with two mates on the paths. Later in the game against Wilkinson he lost another four-bagger, when the wind carried his long belt across the foul line.

In a score of 87 in this event, but because of his non-residence it did not count.

MISS BOBBIE ESCH TO BE MISS GOULD'S PARTNER IN CLAY COURT TOURNAMENT

Miss Caroline Gould of St. Louis and Miss Bobbie Esch of Cleveland will play together in the women's doubles event at the National Clay Court Tournament to be held at Detroit next week.

Miss Esch is one of the best women players in the central section of the country, and during the past several years has won the Ohio State and Cleveland city championships. This team is expected to make a favorable showing in the doubles event. Miss Gould was practicing on the courts at Forest Park yesterday afternoon, and seems in excellent condition for play in Detroit.

AMERICAN GOLFERS ARE BEATEN IN TEAM MATCHES

LONDON, June 18.—American golfers were beaten yesterday in an inter-team match with the Sunningdale Club, four matches to one. In the leading game, Robert A. Gardner of Chicago and Nelson Whitney of New Orleans were beaten by Angus Ianbrow and Guy Campbell, by one hole.

The American golf players will play at Rye tomorrow against the Oxford and Cambridge Society. Then Gardner will proceed to Paris to play at the famous La obilis links Sunday, after which they will return to America. Gardner will sail for New York on the Mauretania.

Flannagan to Box F. Mason, July 1

East St. Louis Club Arranges Bout as Feature of Open Air Attraction.

Patsy Flannagan, the St. Louis boxer, has been matched to meet Frankie Mason of Fort Wayne, American flyweight champion, in the feature 10-round bout of the Century Athletic Club of East St. Louis at an open air show, July 1. It was announced by officials today. The weight will be 117 pounds at 3 o'clock. It will be Flannagan's first bout against a real top-notch.

Two preliminary contests also will be arranged.

ST. LOUISANS TO ENTER CLAY COURT TOURNAMENT

Two more local players have notified their intention of entering the National Clay Court Tournament for men to be held in Chicago during the week commencing July 19. Harry Hotze of the Forest Park Tennis Club expects to enter and will play with Ray Hollinshead in the doubles.

Powell Meyer, another Forest Park player, will also make the trip.

HORSES WILL RUN 'RIGHT' WAY AT BELMONT TRACK

NEW YORK, June 18.—Belmont Park will be turned about when the fall meeting opens on Sept. 2, or, in plainer words, the horses will race the "right" way with the rail to their left, and not the "wrong" way, as heretofore, with the rail to their right.

August Belmont has finally yielded to the insistent demands of those who have objected to the reverse way of running, a plan copied from some of the tracks in England.

No doubt the altogether convincing comparison between the small fields at Belmont Park for the meeting just closed and top heavy fields at Jamaica this week had much to do with the decision. It will not be possible in the short time available to make any changes beyond moving the poles and building a new judges' stand, nearly opposite the old field stand. But these changes will make it possible to run the right way for races over the main course. The long straightaway for the two-year-old races will remain as it is with the finish line near the club house.

Drak Beats Rolando. GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., June 18.—In a heavyweight wrestling contest here last night Tom Drak defeated Gene Rolando in straight falls, the first fall in 30 minutes and the second in 18 minutes. Both falls were the result of a body scissors and further arm lock.

Here's the whole story—

CAMELS never let up in the genuine pleasure they supply smokers! That's because their quality is extraordinary and because they are an expert blend of choice Turkish and choice Domestic tobaccos. Camels never tire your taste, no matter how liberally you smoke, and never leave any unpleasant cigaretty aftertaste or any unpleasant cigaretty odor.

Every puff of Camels is a thrill of pleasure because their flavor is so refreshing—so unusual! Every puff convinces you more and more how greatly you prefer Camels blend to either kind of tobacco smoked straight. It's a fact you'll prove out for yourself that never have you smoked a cigarette so satisfying, so enjoyable, so always appetizing as Camels!

Camels popularity in every corner, bush and burg in the nation is the most convincing proof that they are made to meet your taste! For your own real satisfaction, compare Camels with any cigarette in the world at any price!

Camels are sold everywhere in scientifically sealed packages of 20 cigarettes; or ten packages (200 cigarettes) in a glassine-paper-covered carton. We strongly recommend this carton for the home or office supply or when you travel.

GREY SAYS LEAGUE MISSED TWO GREAT OPPORTUNITIES

Former Secretary for Foreign Affairs Would Submit Anglo-Persian Agreement.

By the Associated Press.
LONDON, June 18.—That the League of Nations had missed two great opportunities with regard to Russia and Persia was the statement of Viscount Grey in a speech at Stratford last night. The former Secretary for Foreign Affairs contended that the only policy toward Russia was one of nonintervention, since Russia was too big for even all the allies together to try to bring order in the country.

The Anglo-Persian agreement, Viscount Grey declared, had given the wrong impression in America and the rest of the world that England was seeking her own interests in Persia. That, he added, had done great harm, and the only remedy now was to submit the agreement to the League of Nations for approval.

LIFE SENTENCE UNDER HABITUAL CRIMINAL ACT

Jury Verdict Against Artist, Charged With Burglary and Larceny, Who Had Been Convicted Before.

CHARGES BASED ON THEFTS FROM CHURCH

Was Arrested Feb. 3 When Robbing Poor Box—Property Stolen From Another Church Found in His Room

A life sentence, under the habitual criminal act, was assessed against Wenzel A. Krejci, an artist, by a jury in Judge Kline's court today. The verdict was arrived at last night and was turned into court sealed this morning.

Krejci, who says he is a graduate of the University of Prague, Bohemia, was charged with burglary and larceny and with having previously been convicted of a felony.

The burglary and larceny charges were based on the theft of moving picture apparatus and other property from the assembly room of the King's Highway Presbyterian Church, Feb. 2 last.

Krejci was arrested Feb. 3 last when robbing a poor box at the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel, Seventh and Desrehan streets. A search of his room at 3636 Page boulevard, after this arrest, disclosed the property stolen the previous day from the King's Highway Presbyterian Church.

Was Maximum Penalty.

The Judge's instructions to the jury were that if it was found that Krejci had committed burglary and larceny and that he had previously been convicted of a felony, the law would admit a maximum penalty of life imprisonment. After the verdict was returned Judge Kline expressed surprise that the maximum penalty had been assessed.

Krejci apparently was stunned by the verdict. He sank back in his chair and for nearly 10 minutes sat there weeping, ignoring the efforts of Deputy Sheriffs to rouse him and take him back to the prisoners' cage.

Krejci's former conviction was in California in 1912, when he was sentenced to 15 months in the penitentiary on burglary and larceny charges. He admitted this on the witness stand yesterday. He denied he stole the articles from the King's Highway Presbyterian Church and said he bought them from a stranger.

Had Been Paroled.

For the robbery of the poor box of the Church of Our Lady of Good Counsel he was sent to the Workhouse and was paroled about two months ago by Judges Miller and Krueger of the Court of Criminal Correction, who did not know of the indictment pending against him.

In his application for a parole Krejci told of his accomplishments as an artist and said he had worked on the new Missouri State capitol.

SUGAR CO. OFFICIAL FINED $10,000 FOR PROFITEERING

Pittsburg Man Said to Have Sold 116,500 Pounds Bought at 18 Cents at 27 to 30.

By the Associated Press.
PITTSBURG, June 18.—J. J. Gilchrist, an official of the Standard Sugar Co., was today fined $10,000 by Judge Thomson in the United States District Court here for profiteering in sugar.

A. P. Burgwin, Assistant United States Attorney, explained to the court that the company had bought 116,500 pounds of sugar in New York at 17 cents a pound, delivered in Pittsburg. Gilchrist, the attorney continued, wanted to market the sugar at a high price, but other officers of the company refused to join him in the enterprise. He then bought the sugar from his associates at 18 cents a pound and sold it, according to the Government, at from 27 to 30 cents a pound.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Harding's Nomination.
 To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
 Tuesday's Post-Dispatch contains a most astonishing letter from a man who says his father and grandfather were Republicans and he voted for Hughes, and now don't care who wins the election.
 Will the "man without a party" please give a good reason why another man should be nominated? What has he ever done to help America? Established a residence abroad, never even voted here, and became prominent by mercilessly bleeding America for "starving millions" overseas (who continue to live and multiply) without any compunction for suffering America.
 The leaders of the Democratic party last election used as a slogan, "He kept us out of war." Clear-headed people knew war was inevitable if our country's honor would be saved, but few at that time were very keen about sacrificing their own comforts for unknown foreigners.
 The pendulum has swung the other way now and the ruthless demands on America for everything seems to be a craze, and I am thankful Mr. Harding stands for America first.
 The spectacle in Chicago last week was enough to cause "angels to weep." Three men fighting for the highest office the nation has to bestow by bribery. Hundreds of thousands of dollars were spent. It did not appear much like free America. Every honest American can be truly thankful for the three factors, Sunday, heat and "extortion," that changed the tide and resulted in nominating a true, loyal American citizen and saved the Republic from obliquity and disgrace. We seem to forget our first duty is at home.
 "To safeguard America first."
 "To stabilize America first."
 "To prosper America first."
 "To think of America first."
 "To exalt America first."
 "To live for and serve America first."
A NATIVE AMERICAN REPUBLICAN.
 The above quotation is from one of Mr. Harding's speeches.

War Tax on Opera Tickets.
 The program of the municipal opera contains a line or two reading, "Patrons: the box office generously, get the habit—buy and boost."
 I did that very thing—I bought reserved seats some time in advance of the opening performance for the entire season, paying the war tax on each ticket, and boosted the show in every way possible, and supposed that by buying in advance I was assisting in a small way toward guaranteeing a successful season. Before I made use of any of the tickets purchased so far in advance the war tax was removed. An article in the papers states that it has not been determined yet whether the tax will be remitted to those purchasing tickets in advance or not. That appears to me to be the rankest kind of injustice. Why should we early purchasers who are "buying and boosting" be penalized by being required to pay more than late purchasers for the same performances?
 Is that the right way to encourage pride and future patronage? It is not like purchasing something at a high price and receiving the goods at the time purchase was made. Tickets for the performances for which I paid $1.10 per seat were sold the night of the performance for $1. There are more than 1000 others who purchased in advance and who feel as I do about the matter, and for that reason won't you please print this letter, so that an expression of opinion may be had from others?
MUSIC LOVER.

A Friend of Mr. Goldstein.
 To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
 For many years I have known Mr. Goldstein and have found him to be a perfect gentleman. If these holy Republican niggers and nibblers would be only as good as he is they could congratulate themselves. They would have done the very same thing they are howling about. I urge every Republican of the Ninth Ward to stand for Mr. Goldstein to a man to show these niggers the effect of their howling. Respectfully yours,
F. HOFFMAN.

Rural Churches.
 To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.
 In a prominent daily I recently read the following startling and suggestive item: "It is little wonder that the Ohio rural life survey found that of 1515 churches in 31 of the counties more than 1000 were deserted, or dying, and that of the 'open country' churches more than three-fourths were not growing."
 It is not enough to point out such a serious situation. An effectual remedy (if one can be found) ought as well to be pointed out and persistently tried. And it may be that more than one remedy ought to be tried and that, too, at the same time. I am disposed to believe that organic church unity will contribute to the desired end. Separate or divided interests and rivalries are not conducive to spiritual life and growth without which churches deserve to die. Wishing you continued success, I remain yours for Christian reforms.
R. H. PARKINSON, D. D.

MR. WILSON'S APPEAL.

In his interview given to the correspondent of the New York World, President Wilson clearly, succinctly and forcefully defined the issue raised by the Republican convention, not merely with regard to the League of Nations, but the entire action of the convention, which he aptly called "the apotheosis of reaction."

Insofar as the ruling senatorial cabal tried to make Mr. Wilson himself the issue and the Lodge hymn of hate its battle chant, the work of the convention was as futile as its proposal for a vaguely indicated plan for guaranteeing the peace of the world separate from the peace covenant framed by the Versailles conference and ratified by our allied war associates and other nations.

Mr. Wilson is not the issue. His personal faults, his mistakes, his course, whether mistaken or not, in handling the peace treaty do not concern the voters. The issue presented to the American people is far greater than the personality or the conduct of any man connected with the negotiations. They are now mere incidents in a splendid effort to bring the nations together in a working agreement to avert the horrors of war, to check imperialistic aggression and to substitute in international relations justice and reason and respect for rights, in place of unbridled greed, exploitation, tyranny and force. The issue of world peace is simple:

Shall the United States join with other nations in striving to preserve the peace of the world on a basis of just international dealing, secured through arbitration?

The only way by which we can join with other nations for this beneficent purpose, which is vital to the progress of civilization and the interest of mankind, is by ratifying the peace treaty with the peace covenant and participating as a full partner in the effort to guarantee just dealing, which is the foundation of peace.

It is the clear duty of the Democratic party, whose administration through the President has created this opportunity to reap the fruits of victory in the war against war, concretely and specifically to stand for the peace covenant in language that cannot be misunderstood or misconstrued by the people.

The issue is broader than the acceptance of the peace covenant word for word as framed and adopted at Versailles. It need not be narrowed to a verbatim scripture. It should be broadened sufficiently to be acceptable to all friends of the peace covenant who support its great purpose and its vital provisions for justice and peace. It should be broad enough to satisfy advocates of reasonable reservations which do not nullify its vital purposes and insure our full and cordial co-operation thereto.

We indulge the hope that the Democratic national convention will heed Mr. Wilson's advice to define specifically its principles and its purposes—to adopt a platform clearly and courageously stating its program and purposes with regard to all the great problems confronting the American people.

By adopting a sound, clear, progressive platform and nominating candidates in whose integrity and capacity and courage the people have confidence, the Democratic party will not only become the hope but the instrument of progress. It can do no less without abandoning its principles and throwing away its opportunity for service.

THE STRUGGLE FOR OIL.

The avowed policy upon which the British Government has embarked to control the oil supply of the world, through its participation in the explorations and other operations of private British companies, prompted Senator Phelan to introduce a bill for the formation of a great Government corporation adequate to compete with the British efforts in obtaining and operating oil concessions in foreign countries.

Senator Phelan introduced his bill following the submission of a report from the State Department on the oil activities of Great Britain. This report indicated that the British policy aimed at the exclusion of aliens from control of oil supplies in the empire and British control of oil supplies in foreign countries by the following methods:

By barring aliens from owning or operating oil properties in British territories.
 By direct participation of the Government in the ownership of British companies.
 By preventing British companies from selling their interests to aliens.
 By prohibiting the transfer of shares in British companies to other than British subjects.

In many of the most promising fields of the world the Americans and others are already excluded by reason of British monopoly, as, for example, in Persia, where the British have exclusive rights for 60 years.

It is a little late for the United States to be waking up to the importance of oil and the vital part it plays not only in commerce and industry but also in the navigation of public ships, but it is not too late to conserve some of our own large supplies and to add to them from other lands. The oil fields of the United States have been open to all comers, with no questions asked. As a result foreign-owned companies are operating in this country on a huge scale. One need only mention the Royal Dutch company, the largest distributor in Europe, with its vast holdings in California, Texas and elsewhere. Similarly British companies have not been asleep to their opportunities in this country.

most formidable, the Dutch is not to be overlooked. That Government is said now to be contemplating granting to the Royal Shell Co. the exclusive right to oil in its East Indian possessions. Meantime, France is bestirring herself in the search and protection of her oil supplies in her new African possessions and elsewhere.

The world is witnessing a keen international struggle for the possession of an adequate supply of this basic article of which there is not visible enough to go around. In the not distant future a few of the more far-sighted states may lay the rest of the world under tribute, reducing it to economic vassalage. If this is to be the eventually there is no question as to whether the United States should be the diner or the diner.

"NATURAL BARRIERS" IN RATE-MAKING.

What an interestingly complicated problem railroad rate-making in America would become, if the Interstate Commerce Commission's theory as to "natural barriers" were given application to every rail line in the country.

All routes leading across the Rocky Mountains would be divided into three parts, the first from starting point to the foot of the mountains, the second the haul through the passes and the third from the other side of the mountains to destination. Hauls via the Hoosac tunnel would have the same division, with a special charge for the six miles of the tunnel. Every crossing of an important river—and there are a lot of such rivers in America, the Susquehanna, the Delaware, the Connecticut, various Mississippi tributaries, the Mississippi itself at certain points, the Colorado, the streams of the Columbia watershed and many others—would have to be represented by a separate excess charge in the rate schedule. An excellent example of rate complication would be presented under the very eyes of the commission. The Potomac at Washington is as broad a stream as is the Mississippi at St. Louis. Under this theory the rate into Washington would be found by taking the rate to the south bank of the river and then adding the rate from the bank into the freight depot. As a matter of fact, rate-making is, with a few exceptions, based on a directly opposite theory.

St. Louis "natural barrier" is not easily overcome, says Commissioner Atkinson. But are there no other natural barriers which also are not easily overcome? Is the entire cost of overcoming them to be added onto cities located adjacent thereto, when the fact that they have been overcome is of benefit to the entire transportation system of the country and all territory reached by such system? The economic handicap resulting from this unjustly imposed cost is a problem St. Louis must solve, adds the Commissioner. Why St. Louis alone rather than all the cities benefited?

THE SEDALIA CONFERENCE.

The conference on housecleaning in Missouri Republicanism appointed for Sedalia on June 24 is meeting with some discouragements in the refusal to participate of persons of putative usefulness in housecleaning. The work admittedly will be a heavy one. Thoughtful planning and exchange of view are necessary if effort is to be well directed. The single individual can accomplish nothing, or at best very little, in a task of such magnitude. He must join himself to others having a like commendable intent. Associated effort, organization, concerted action are essential to the desired result.

Those who have called the conference may be building better than they know. Sedalia may start something. The rank and file of the party are much more sensitive to the disgrace, much more aroused than the smirched bosses suppose. They will co-operate to some purpose if shown the way under energetic leaders.

Occasionally a June day appears that vindicates the summer furs. There's a trace of real common sense inside of woman's fashions now and then, in addition to the irresistible beauty contained therein.

LYNCHING BELT EXTENDED TO DULUTH.

The lynching of the three negroes at Duluth is just as deplorable, just as offensive to all sense of order and equity, just as much of a reproach to American institutions, as if it had taken place where the winds bite less shrewdly and where the season of frost is much shorter. The psychology of the mob is well understood, unfortunate as it is that America has had so many opportunities to study it. With energy and show of resolution a mob in the formative stage may be opposed successfully and dispersed, but may become irresistible if those qualities are absent in the representatives of the law. The Governor of Kentucky has shown how the lynching spirit may be dealt with effectively. What will the Governor of Minnesota do?

A lynching party in a Southern rural county seat attacking an antiquated jail, defended only by the Sheriff and a deputy or two, is one thing. A lynching party attacking prisoners held in custody in a modern, well-equipped town with a trained force of armed police, is quite another thing. That American citizens should be prompted to take the law into their own hands is as lamentable in the one case as the other, but the guardians of the peace in the town have the less excuse. Great shame attaches to Duluth. The allegation that one, perhaps all of the three put to death, were innocent is doubtless true.

JUST A MINUTE

FREE VERSE.
 THE other day I saw a crowd about a police wagon at the Federal building.
 That looked interesting, so I rattled my banisters up the sidewalk and squeezed in.
 A still had been laid.
 There it stood—a rather nice-looking copper affair with copper coil, though nothing like so big or so fine as they tell us everybody has in North Carolina.
 Anyway, the still and several cases of bottles had been unloaded, and six or eight of the biggest cops you ever saw were unloading from the wagon about 50 boxes of raisins.
 Everybody in the crowd was highly amused. The cops were grim and unjesting, but the rest of us all wore the biggest sort of a grin.
 Why?
 Was it funny?
 Here went the hopes, the aspirations and probably the whole working capital of some citizen of the republic who had thought to preserve to himself some part of the freedom vouchsafed him by the Bartholdi statue.
 The whole thing was being unloaded by the six or eight big cops as if it were so much booty recovered from a car thief.
 The unfortunate moonshiner was not to be seen.
 He was probably lying on the floor in chains somewhere inside.
 Wretch that he was!
 Be that as it may, I came on up Locust street. I was wondering.
 Possibly others who were in that crowd and had seen this felon brought to justice were also wondering.
 I wonder.
 Anyway, to make sure of what was in my mind, I went back and walked around the Federal building.
 I wanted to see if there was any place where they were bringing in profiteers.
 I wanted to see if there was any place where they were unloading sugar and other hoarded foods.
 There was none.
 They were just bringing in this fellow, wretch that he was.
 I was right about that.
 I had feared so.

THE INCREDIBLE DRYS.

The drys are easily our most annoying people. They have both the zeal and audacity of the crusaders. We have nothing in Maurice Hewlett's celebrated "Richard Yea and Nay" surpassing in what was exactly the spirit of the crusades the announcement of Br'er Hay that he is going to open his headquarters as a candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination in the old barroom of the Planters.
 Imagine that!
 Br'er Hay, arch dry of the State, homes of the cities and hero of the blazing interior, walks into the old Planters bar, a place hallowed with the memories of a conquered faith, and makes that hallowed ground his Ebenezzer of abstinence!

We won't ask you if you can beat it, though the inquiry would be pertinent enough.
 We know you can't beat it.
 Like the crusaders, Br'er Hay is not content to grind us under foot. He must taunt us and gloat over us. He must make the very shrine of Allah a Christian temple and the palace of Saladin a Presbyterian Kirk.

Have a care, Br'er Hay! We can never be sure who is to be the infidel finally.

The only way the row between Hi Johnson and Gov. Lowden could be fixed up was for both of them to go into the chair car, which was what they did.

 AL LEVIN.

It will not be necessary for the people of the Mississippi Valley to ask Mr. McAdoo about his attitude toward using the inland waterways, because it is Mr. McAdoo we have to thank for the Government barge line. If he did not believe in using the inland waterways he would not have involved the Government to the tune of some $20,000,000 in the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans. Mr. McAdoo isn't that kind of a man, as almost any railroad man who tried to get some of the $500,000,000 revolving fund out of him would cheerfully testify if railroad men could be cheerful about waterways.
 It was because of that fund Mr. McAdoo was made Director-General of Railroads. It has been said of him that as a public official he is the hardest man we have to see on private business. Chicago and the other lake cities are for opening the lakes to ocean craft by way of the St. Lawrence. Mr. Hoover was for that. If he had been for using the rivers of the Mississippi Valley as well we would have dissuaded him from confessing that he used to be a Republican and let him run on the Democratic ticket with Mr. McAdoo. But to get back to Mr. McAdoo: He understood what we were talking about here in the valley when we asked him to put in the barge service, and he is the first man we have ever heard in high place at Washington who did understand us. We broke our hearts on Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft. It was in Mr. Wilson that we first saw the promised land. He said we did not have to tell him what the railroads had done to the waterways, because he watched them massacre a nice little canal on the banks of which he happened to live and saw exactly how it was done. Then came Mr. McAdoo, who can see through a tree, and gave us the barge line. It fairly makes one's heart bound to think what a man like that as President of the United States could do for transportation. We could come out of it on the heels of the European countries which have been at it for centuries. It wouldn't hurt this valley to have a President. Wall street, we think, has been sufficiently developed.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading public newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

THE DUTCH EAST INDIES.

ACCORDING to a commercial traveler who recently returned from the Dutch East Indies there are inviting fields there for Americans, particularly professional men and skilled workers. He reports a great shortage of civil and mechanical engineers, and several American railway engineers and technical experts in other lines have been successful in obtaining lucrative positions. Many of the Government departments have vacancies for engineers who know the Dutch language. Business in the islands is much better than in many years. The people have money to spend and are buying freely. There is especially strong demand for automobiles. There is a brisk market for household fittings and furniture. Much building is in progress and the people want the best in the way of sanitary and decorative fixtures. Five-passenger and seven-passenger motor cars are finding eager buyers. Almost all of the cars seen in the archipelago are of American make. Money is very plentiful in Java, he reports. Sugar, the staple of the country, is being sold at four times the price obtained in pre-war times, the ratio being 35 guilders now as compared with 8 guilders previously. As the cost of production is not much higher than it was before the war, the prosperity which has resulted from this tremendous advance in price is great and has increased the purchasing power of the people to a large extent. This has resulted in heavy increase in the foreign trade of the island and the new harbor recently built at Batavia is already too small for the shipping demands made upon it.

Said the Lady to Larry O'Gorman by Holman Day

(THIRD INSTALLMENT.)

IN spite of her efforts to receive O'Gorman's proffer of aid with thankfulness, Esther's manner showed doubt instead of relief.

"Mum's the word, miss. I'm no hand to peer and pry. A lady must needs save her face—and any word that it was connived shall ne'er bring a blush to ye!"

"Just what do you mean, Mr. O'Gorman?" stammered the girl.

The boss pointed to Tomah. "I mean I'll handle him."

Then Miss Virabell did show distinct relief. Of such was her quest; it was the service that she required from this master of men.

"O, now we understand each other, Mr. O'Gorman!"

"I'll handle him according to your own taste! You have hinted on the thing in only a genteel, lady way, but I know what is wanted. I'll manage him."

"You're one after my own heart, Mr. O'Gorman!"

"But what! It must be after my own way." He stepped a few paces away from her and called: "Here, Angus Bain!"

The Scotchman, who was tilling up the trail, laid down his burden and advanced. "I lay ye off the job, my man, till ye guide the ladies to Pattagamon and the return."

"But"—Esther raised protesting hands.

"No better tyke than Angus on the river, miss, with the ash breeze! And ye can swap with him all the talk ye will about Lochinvar, because Angus knew the lad well."

"But I need Tomah!"

"Ye'll sure have him, miss, all in good time! But the whilst must be held! Ye must step lightly. I have known the trick ever since I kicked the froth of the Racing Horse into a bubble and rode ashore on the bulge of it."

He hurried away from her and lifted the canoe upon Angus Bain's shoulders. "On your way, man, for the wedding won't wait."

His tongue running full tilt, to the exclusion of all of Esther's efforts to put in a plaintive word, O'Gorman sent the patron and the maiden on their way, showering them with good-bys and good wishes.

"It's a headstrong mon he is, wi' high conceit of his ainself," Angus ventured to comment. "I'd not trust his judgment—" He broke off in order to adjust the canoe which had been tossed upon his shoulders by the boss with scant care for the guide's comfort.

Esther gasped and slowed her pace with the air of one about to abandon an enterprise.

"His judgment," continued the guide, "on matters connected wi' the gr-r-r-and meenestrees of Scotland. But on the ways o' men—and on his opinion o' meel' as a brow mon wi' a canoe—and in doing the deed he says he'll do, he's toller-r-rably right!"

The dea ex machina went on with a better display of confidence.

"The beauties of the ten miles of placid river below 'The Devilbrew,' on the way to Pattagamon, interested Mrs. Jocelyn; she and Angus did all the talking; Esther was allowed to busy herself with her thoughts. She was comforted and encouraged in spite of her doubts! Mrs. O'Gorman seemed to be sure of himself and of the right way to manage Tomah Danah!

"That plan—it means she marries Tomah Danah? I have no ears for such a plan, mam'selle. No!"

Rounding a great bend in the river, they saw Pattagamon. The thrust of the chapel's steeple from among the willows and from the huddle of the little houses did not suggest to Esther the consolations of religious peace; that spire was a warning finger, like the finger that the Governor had raised the day before. "Here, this night, is to be wedded the daughter of Gov. Nicolin of the Tarratines," the steeple seemed to signal. "Let no meddlesome pale face interfere," it warned.

"I'm glad I came," confided Mrs. Jocelyn amiably. "You were lucky to have an invitation that would include me, Esther, dear. It's going to be so picturesque, and such a lovely experience, I'm sure!"

Miss Virabell was not at all sure. But she informed herself that, in spite of his title, Susep Nicolin was only a squatty man who wore ready made clothes and a hard hat. Of course, there was his Indian pride, and all that, but he had distinctly stated his reason—his sole and especial reason—why he would not have Tomah Danah as son-in-law. Her plan, so Esther induced her to believe, would take care of his objection. Talk of the people? Surely there could not be much more talk than had been stirred by a girl's flight on the day set for the wedding! Another postponement, and even another bridegroom, would not make much more opportunity for gossip.

Angus, displaying his ability as a canoe man, made a gallant start of the last stage of the journey, for there was a considerable crowd of observers on the shore, near the landing place.

The ranks of the people opened when the canoe surged up to the float with froth at the prow. Gov. Susep Nicolin walked through the press and stood at the edge of the shore, his hands outstretched to assist Esther from the canoe.

But this was Gov. Nicolin in the sash garb of the Tarratines—the festive dress of his forefathers. The eagle feathers towered from the fillet that bound his hair. Esther stared up at him from the canoe and wondered how it was that he had grown so tall; her eyes were dazzled by the flash of the rays of the setting sun reflected from the cuirass of his beaded jacket.

"You are welcome to the wedding, mam'selle." He helped her to step from the canoe; he assisted Mrs. Jocelyn and bowed when Esther stammered an introduction. "All are welcome to Pattagamon today."

The girl instantly realized that if she hesitated, if she waited to weigh the pro against the con, if she paused to take full account of stock of this new personage, her cause was lost. She lashed her flagging courage with the limp things of her natural impulsiveness. "Gov. Nicolin, may I have a few words with you in private?"

He led the way to a knoll and the two of them stood on the crest of it. The people gazed up at them from below.

"It doesn't seem so very private," complained Esther.

"They will not hear."

"Of course, you know it's about Zarlona. That's why I am here. I have a plan."

"That plan—it means she marries Tomah Danah?"

"Yes! But listen!"

"I have no ears for such a plan, mam'selle. No!" He put up his hand.

"But this is business."

"Business at Pattagamon waits till after the wedding! I have given orders. I set the example." He waved his hand, directing her attention to the idlers.

"May I talk with Zarlona?"

"After the wedding."

"Will you listen to—"

"After the wedding, mam'selle! Now I go. Have much to do." He turned his back on her and started down the mound. The eagle feathers, horrid in his crest, and trailing to his heels in a double row, his manner, all his dress, made him something almost unreal, in Esther's new estimate of him. Arguing with that personage seemed to be like trying to beat sense into a picture in a book!

Esther, with all those upturned eyes circling her, was stricken with stage fright. The Indians continued to survey her as if they expected her to make a speech! That embarrassing situation in itself was enough to put a girl to flight! But the thought of the mental torture she would suffer by remaining to behold the poor victim sacrificed to Docteur Carrière was a stronger compelling motive for retreat.

Esther ran down to Angus, who was carefully upturning the canoe on the pull-out rack. "Put it in the water! Come, Mrs. Jocelyn!"

"Come!" echoed the incredulous lady.

"Yes! We're going to start back—at once—back to the hotel!"

Mr. Bain entertained no doubts as to who were his bosses on that day and date—one was present and the other was up the river—and O'Gorman was never a reasonable man when orders had not been obeyed.

"But it's coming night!" sputtered the matron. Bain set the canoe upon the water and Esther stepped in.

Angus turned to Mrs. Jocelyn. "'Tis the full o' the moon and moonlight ay makes the gr-r-r-path o' the reever. Gie me your hand, madam, and step careful!"

Mrs. Jocelyn obeyed orders.

"Esther Virabell, tell me what all this means!" demanded Mrs. Jocelyn as soon as they were on their way.

"I have not one word to say."

"You're getting to be quite an Indian in this new freak of keeping your mouth shut!"

The lurch that Miss Virabell gave the canoe when she whirled around from her seat in the bow to face Mrs. Jocelyn nearly upset the craft. "Don't you dare to intimate to me that I'm like an Indian or want to be like one! I hate the whole tribe! I don't care to spoil the peace of a calm evening by silly gabble, that's all!"

After that robust retort there were no sounds except Angus Bain's rhythmic grunts of effort and the lisp of his paddle blade in the water.

Even when the moon rolled its disk of glory into the eastern sky—a spectacle to provoke the usual psalm of feminine praise—Mrs. Jocelyn maintained her reproachful silence.

Therefore, in that stillness, those in the canoe could hear sounds from afar. Esther listened for some time to a chorus of men's voices, increasing in volume, coming nearer from up the river.

"If I may make so free as to venture my thowt, ut's the Busters of O'Gorman's crew, and they're singing one of his comeall-ye's. On to the wedding, most like!" said Angus.

"I don't care to be seen by any rabble of that sort! Turn the canoe to the shore and wait under the shadows!" commanded the girl irritably.

To meet Boss O'Gorman—to venture into the tumult of that oncoming hilarity—to confess that she had not been able to wedge in edgewise one word of her grand plan when she had been face to face with Governor Nicolin! Her cheeks burned while the canoe floated in the blessed shadows. Thinking on Governor Susep Nicolin as she had seen him last, pondering on her puny efforts at meddling, Esther quite convinced herself that she had been going through an attack of midsummer madness; that she was sane once more was proved by her ability to perceive now what a fool she had been making of herself and by her determination to mind her own business from then on, she decided.

Bateaux went surging down the middle of the moonlit river. Men were crowded into boats and the blades of the sweeping oars tossed up the flashing waters. A voice, which was unmistakably that of Larry O'Gorman, bawled the singers into silence.

"I'll give ye the lilt o' the new valse, meself, and ye're to come in on the chorus."

"Ow, the ways o' her were all ginteel, tho' roguesh were her eyes."

Says she to me, 'The lad for me, 'tis e'er the lad who tries!'

Says I to her, 'Twill sure be done! Fair maid, I bow my knee.'

And I do wate'er a la-dee says when she says a thing to me."

Then came the call for "chorus!"

"Whoop, all good men, and mind your step where'er the ladies say!"

So shall ye win the hearts o' them, sing larry down ay day!"

"Paddle on!" commanded Esther when the river was clear again.

"It's a gang that kens better what to do at a log jam than at a wedding," averred Angus. "I wonder what's prompting 'em to mak' so free wi' the merrymakings for Nicolin's daughter?"

Mrs. Chester M. Curry's Philosophy.

BY FAY STEVENSON.

WOMEN vote. Women smoke cigarettes. And now the latest feminine accomplishment is playing poker!

For five years a circle of society women in New York has been meeting and indulging in a "friendly III" game. And according to one of the members and star players it is an excellent game PROVIDED it does not turn a woman's head.

"Poker is a good test for a woman's honor. It is one of the best games in the world to bring out character. If she is honest she can stand losing, but if she has something of the 'shoplifting nature' in her I would advise her to refrain from playing."

This is the philosophy of Mrs. Chester M. Curry, wife of a rubber exporter, who had Mrs. C. Gleason said to be the wife of a Chicago broker, arraigned in a New York Police Court on a charge of stealing her $1750 diamond pin and over $200 in cash during the course of a "friendly III" game of poker at Mrs. Curry's home.

Womanlike, Mrs. Curry wanted to tell me all about the diamond pin, the $200, the poker party and Mrs. Gleason when I originally called at her apartment merely to talk about women and poker in general.

Enshrined in a loose, flowing, pink crepe dressing gown, her Titan hair piled high on her head, with a little pinkness dog almost the same tint as her hair close at her heels, Mrs. Curry showed me all about her apartment, pointing out the chiffonier, the beaded bag which contained the money, the box which contained the pin, and the dining room where the game was played.

"Usually we girls play in the afternoon two or three times a week," said Mrs. Curry, "but once in a great while, when one of our husbands is out of town or we all can arrange to be free, we have a night game. At 12 we give a midnight supper, and after 'setting up' we have a good old-fashioned talk."

"Now, we girls have known each other for years, we call each other by our first names and know all about each other. On this particular evening of May 20, when Mrs. Curry was going out of town, he gave me $200 because I was going to give a party and needed the money for the supper and any debts I might contract."

"Before Mr. Curry left he sent me a bunch of the beautiful yellow lilies, which I placed on the table at the foot of my bed. While the butler was preparing the dining-room table for supper after our game I asked the girls to come in and see my flowers."

"Mrs. Gleason was a stranger who came uninvited to my party, but since she was the friend of Mrs. Clark, my intimate friend, and another member of our party was in Washington, I was very glad to have her play. While the ladies were admiring my flowers I went to the chiffonier, took $200 out of my bag and laid it in settling up what I had lost. My diamond pin was in the bureau on the opposite side of the room. I don't care very much for jewelry and I seldom wear it. Of course, every one saw me go to my purse, but no one knew about the pin in the bureau."

"During the course of the supper Mrs. Gleason asked to be excused to powder her nose," continued Mrs. Curry. "Later I missed the pin, my $200 and a few bills (I don't know exactly how many), just some money I had before Mr. Curry gave me the $200."

"The next morning I notified Charles L. Leonard of the Aetna Insurance Co., with whom I had my jewels insured; gave him the names of the women at the party and asked him to locate the pin, if possible. He traced Mrs. Gleason to Atlantic City and secured the pin. At present Mrs. Gleason is out on $50000 bail."

"And I think women should not play poker unless they can stand to lose?" I asked.

"Some women cannot stand to lose, they don't know how to be good sports," concluded Mrs. Curry. "Usually Mrs. Gleason is a cracker—Jack poker player, I am told," con-

"When he can get into the camps of men he is perfectly happy, for many are the things strange to him, and therefore interesting, he finds there. Anything he can carry away he takes, but being honest he tries to leave something in return. Whenever any small object is missed in a camp the first place visited in search of it is Trader's museum. All sorts of queer things are found there: buckles cut from saddles left on the ground at night, spoons, knives, forks, even money taken from the pockets of sleeping men. In the mountains he often makes little piles of pebbles just for the fun of collecting them."

"Trader is found all over the West from the mountains to the deserts, in forests and on sandy wastes. In many places he is called the Pack Rat. This is because of his habit of carrying away things, and in those places carrying is called packing. He is also found in parts of the East and in the Sunny South. He is a great climber and is quite at home in trees or among rocks. He eats seeds, nuts, grain, leaves and other parts of plants. Where the winters are long and cold he lays up stores as a thrifty person should."

"What kind of a home does he have?" asked Happy Jack Squirrel.

"His home usually is a remarkable affair," replied Old Mother Nature. "It depends largely on where he lives. When he is living in rock country he makes it among the rocks. In some places he burrows in the ground. More often he builds his home on the surface of the ground, a huge pile of sticks and thorns, in the very middle of which is a snug, soft nest. The sticks and thorns are to protect that nest from enemies. When he lives where the cactus grows, those queer plants with long sharp spines, like the quills of Prickly Porky the Porcupine, he uses these. There are few enemies who will even try to pull one of these houses apart to get at him. Trader's house is a regular castle."

"When he is alarmed he has a funny way of drumming on the ground with his hind feet, something like the Peppermint Jumper and the Hare thump, only Trader does it

Uncommon Sense

By John Blake.

Your Mind Is an Open Shop.

PREJUDICE, in this life, does as much mischief as crime. It is at the bottom of about half our troubles. It takes all manner of forms, and afflicts all manner of people. And always it is a force for evil.

Your mind ought to be an open shop. Reject no ideas that come to it. Accept them as they come, for it is by ideas that you will succeed.

You can soon tell if they are good ideas or bad. If they are good ideas they will serve you. If they are bad ideas they will make you ideas them. Put the good ones to work, and reject the bad altogether. But never reject any because of your prejudices. Never, because you do not like a man's race, or his religion, or the color of his hair, or the fact that he has an impediment in his speech, refuse to listen to him if he has anything to tell you.

And never reject any idea because it does not happen to square with your preconceived notions.

You may have held to such notions throughout your lifetime. You may have inherited them from your father. But till you have put them to the test, do not contend that they are infallible.

When a new idea comes along, try it out. Think it over. Apply it to your method of living.

To the people of the Fifteenth Century the idea that the world was round was idiotic. To them and their ancestors the world was flat. They had taken that for granted. But gradually they were forced to accept Columbus' theory. Had they been free from prejudices they would have accepted it when it was first suggested, tested it, and the progress of the world would have been just that much ahead.

Half of the harmful reaction of today comes from prejudice. Few men with new ideas ever get them accepted till they have advanced them for many years. Meanwhile, the world and the people that dwell in it are losers.

Shake off all forms of prejudice. Make your mind an open shop, where the new idea is welcome till it proves useless. You will develop much faster, and, incidentally, you will be a far more valuable citizen.

Cleaning Colored Materials.

WHEN a chemical is used to remove stains from colored clothes there is the possibility that the color of the material will go with the stain. If the stain is on figured or striped goods, use the end of a match, or a glass dropper in applying the chemical, and touch nothing but the stain. Then wash quickly. Or rub the rest of the figure or stripe, next the stain, with the narrow edge of a cake of soap, to prevent the chemical from spreading; rinse very quickly after removing the stain.

It is necessary to know not only how to remove a stain from a colored fabric, but also how to complete the cleaning after the stain is gone. Prepare a solution of such a mild soap as Ivory or Lux, warm, but not hot, and wash the material quickly in this as soon as the stain is gone. Rinse it through two waters, dip it in salt water, and wring it very dry. Turn it inside out and dry it in a shady place.

Not all colored clothes can be put into bluing water. If a yellow cloth were put into bluing water, it would probably turn green. Pink would probably become purple. Pink, green, yellow or lavender fabrics should not be put into bluing water.

Wash only one color in one water, rinse it by itself, and set the color in salt water. Colored clothes cannot be boiled without risk of fading or of causing the color to bleed, that is, to pass from the pattern or stripe into the background. If the clothes need starching, do not use very hot starch water.

MORE TRUTH THAN POETRY

By James J. Montague.

NAMES.

The names the thing—if I should sign
The name of Bobbie Burns
To these sweet, simple lines of mine,
And wait for the returns,
Perhaps, by virtue of the name
They'd scintillate and shine,
And soon achieve the mighty fame
That came to "Auld Lang Syne."
More likely though, you'd say, "At times
The best of poets miss;
Why even Burns wrote rotten rhymes—
For instance, look at this!"

It's names that count—suppose I wrote
The name of old John D.
Upon a million dollar note,
Made payable to me.
Perhaps some kindly bank cashier
The paper would behold,
And in an awe-struck tone say, "Here,
Please take away this gold!"
More likely though he'd call a cop,
A locust club would swing;
And for a year or more I'd stop
In lovely Ossining.

Names do the trick—were I to be
Some evening placed before
An audience that came to see
John Drew or Barrymore,
Perhaps I'd worry through the roles,
And everybody would Exclaim aloud, "Lord bless our souls,
The fellow sure is good!"
I might win reputation, fame
And heaps of money by it.
I might, I say, but just the same,
I do not think I'll try it!

COURT TO PASS ON J. R. RECEIVER'S PLEA

Master Will Submit Request to Give Preference to $4,000,000 in Certificates.

Former Judge Henry Lamm, special master in the United Railways receivership case, today announced that he would ask the District Court for an order, on application of Receiver Wells, authorizing that $4,000,000 worth of receiver's certificates be given precedence over mortgages held by the Mercantile Trust Co. and the St. Louis Union Trust Co. and over the mill tax due the city.

Receiver Wells has asked that the certificates be given this precedence so that money necessary for the operation of the system could be raised without being subject to these mortgages and tax claims.

To Re-Style the Suit. Judge Lamm also said he would ask the court to re-style the receivership suit so as to give it the title "Adler versus St. Louis Transit Co. and United Railways Co." This is in accordance with a recent Court of Appeals decision that the receiver was appointed under the Adler petition and not under the John W. Seaman petition.

The Toronto Car Advertising Co. of New York filed a petition with the Special Master asking that United Railways street car advertising be made the subject of competitive bids. It offered to pay to the company 50 per cent of its gross receipts from inside car advertising and 60 per cent of its receipts from dashboard advertising on St. Louis cars. This, it said, would yield more than $90,000 a year.

A hearing on the application of the Western Advertising Co. of St. Louis for an extension of its present contract for street car advertising at $50,000 a year was continued indefinitely. Its contract expires October 31, 1921.

Broker and Lawyer Agree. After a hearing before the Special Master, J. Brooks Johnson, a money broker, and John A. Gilliam, an attorney, reached a temporary compromise as to their share of a judgment recently awarded to them by the Supreme Court of Missouri on damage claims aggregating $58,399.13 against the St. Louis Transit Co.

They had bought these claims from the original holders and the court decided that United Railways was liable for the claims. Gilliam put in an additional claim for $4000 expenses, which he said he had paid in prosecuting the suit. Johnson alleged that he furnished the expense money.

A stipulation was filed in which it was agreed that Johnson would take $41,150 and Gilliam $292.63 as their temporary shares and that the remaining $3000 should be deposited with the clerk of the court and invested in Victory Bonds pending a court settlement of the controversy over the expense money.

DAYLIGHT BURGLAR LOCKS DOG IN CLOSET

Opens Girl's Mail in Enright Avenue Home—Blankets and Linnen Stolen.

A daylight burglar in the home of Dennis J. Hart, 4330 Enright avenue, locked the family building in a kitchen closet before he ransacked the home yesterday afternoon. After taking $200 in jewelry and a rosary, he went to the front hall and opened some mail addressed to Miss Hora Frendall that had been left on a table awaiting her homecoming. Apparently he read the letter and dropped it back on the table.

An assortment of plunder was carried away by a daylight burglar in the home of Carey T. Broeg, 4565 Enright avenue. It included linens and blankets valued at $200, a silver cup made from 35 silver dollars and a $5 gold piece, two ounces of perfume, a quart of gin, five pounds of flour, two pounds of sugar and a half pound of butter.

Four homes in one block on Carr street were entered while the families slept last night. Mrs. Nina Novack, 1319 Carr street, awakened by a noise at midnight, got out of bed and saw a negro ransacking the rooms. The burglar jumped out of a window when she screamed. At the home of Mrs. Mary Caplin, 1315 Carr street, $150 was taken, from a pair of trousers, and from the home of Louis Herman, 1317 Carr street, $250. The same burglar apparently got into the home of Henry Cohn, 1309 Carr street, and stole $30 and jewelry valued at $150. The home of Samuel Miller, 1520 Wash street, two blocks away, was also robbed of jewelry valued at $100.

Capt. Mary Jobe of the Salvation Army, returning to her home, 1216A Dillon street, at 8:45 p. m., routed a burglar who had entered with a duplicate key.

Mrs. Louis Blizoni, 5010 Minerva avenue, awakened at 2 a. m. yesterday by a draught in the house, got up and found a burglar had left a window open and was ransacking the place. He jumped out of a bathroom window.

Other burglaries were in the homes of Mrs. Esther Levy, 5563 Pershing avenue, screen cut and a baby's bank containing $35 taken; James Maccaulm Jr., 3937 West Pine boulevard, $46.75, and Charles H. Nordan, 4572 Kensington avenue, $4.10.

Two Fined for Careless Driving.

Robert S. Peck of 1459A Goodfellow avenue and Otto Weight of 3950 Bates street were each fined $25 in police court this morning on a charge of careless driving. On June 3 Peck, driving west on Winnebago street near Nebraska avenue, collided with Weight's automobile, which was going south on Nebraska avenue.

DEMOCRATIC WOMEN DEMAND 15 PLANKS

Abolition of Child Labor, Appointments on Boards Dealing With Labor Urged.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 18.—Fifteen planks which the Democratic National convention will be asked to include in its platform were sent today to delegates to the convention by the Women's Bureau of the Democratic National Committee. The planks were prepared by the Labor Committee of the Bureau, of which Mrs. Robert Bruere of New York is chairman, after a conference with various bodies of workers. The planks advocate the right of collective bargaining between employers and employees through representatives of their own choosing; Government control of basic industries affecting the necessities of life; nationalization of the railroads and their administration by a corporation or commission on which the public, the management and labor shall be represented; operation of Federal fuel and steel commissions and development of the present system of collective bargaining into national industrial councils of the industries.

The committee also urges abolition of labor of children under 14; general adoption of an eight-hour law; that wages be placed on the basis of service without regard to sex, and minimum wages, "which will insure to all wage earners a proper standard of health, comfort and efficiency."

Other planks recommended include:

Development of a national system of employment offices under joint control of Federal and State boards and organization of labor corps with transportation subsidies for harvesting; extension and development of the Bureau of Women in Industry in the Department of Labor and appointment of women on all Government boards dealing with labor; enactment of Federal and State legislation to foster organizations of producers and consumers' co-operative organizations and credit societies; insurance for all workers against accidents, disease, disability, unemployment and old age.

The recommendations condemn the use of "mandatory and prohibitory injunction in labor disputes," and also the treatment of labor as a commodity.

Development of the Bureau of Labor statistics to make public facts concerning investment, capitalization, earnings and wages also is urged.

PRESBYTERIAN MISSIONARY TO EXPLAIN LEPER COLONY WORK

The Rev. J. Kelly Unger Will Speak to Several St. Louis Congregations Sunday.

The work of the International Mission for Lepers is being presented to a number of St. Louis church congregations by the Rev. J. Kelly Unger. He will speak Sunday in the Sunday school of Bethel Evangelical Church, Garrison and Greer avenues, at the morning services of the Independent Evangelical Church, Margaretta and Fair avenues, and Hope Congregational Church, Cote Brillante and Semple avenues, and at night in West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues.

The mission, as described in his address, ministers to 93 leper colonies. Congress has appropriated $250,000 for the building of a home for lepers in the United States, but local objections, thus far, have made it impossible to obtain a location. The Rev. Mr. Unger is under appointment of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, and expects missionary work in China this fall.

TO REFUND OPERA WAR TAX

Municipal Association Awaits Ruling From Washington Before Returning Money.

The Municipal Opera Association is waiting for a further ruling from the Treasury Department before beginning to make a refund of the war tax collected on the tickets for the first three performances last week. A previous ruling held that the opera enterprise is an educational institution under the rulings of the revenue act of 1918, and is therefore exempt from taxation.

"We are waiting," said Nelson Cunliff, chairman of the Productions Committee, "for a ruling from Washington as to how we shall proceed in the refund on the advance ticket sale. In anticipation of the ruling, we are making preparations to begin refunding on all traceable tickets properly presented at the ticket office. We hope to receive this ruling before Monday."

300 ITALIAN PRISONERS KILLED

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, June 18.—Three hundred and thirty Italian prisoners have been killed by infuriated Albanians at Tirana, according to a telegram from Belgrade quoting reports reaching that city.

It is said the Albanians were maddened by news of the assassination of Essad Pasha, former Provisional President of Albania, in Paris early this week, and attributed his death to Italian intrigue. More than a score of Italian prisoners en route to Tirana were taken from a train and killed at Krachar, it is asserted, and anxiety is expressed concerning the fate of more than 2000 Italian officers and men captured by Albanians in the fighting before Avlona, where the struggle is still going on.

Bond's

Clothes

Bond's Clothes Keep You Cool and Satisfied

—they are made right; they look good; they save you $10

It is seldom that a man walks into Bond's store, who doesn't buy before he leaves; this condition is true—not because of "clever salesmanship" but because of Bond's quality at Bond's prices. You can't get away from facts, and the facts are: Bond's merchandise and Bond's merchandising methods have gained a most enviable reputation here in St. Louis.

Palm Beach and Cool Cloth Suits

$16.50

Suits worthy of your most careful inspection; there is nothing to "hide" about a Bond Summer Suit: they are so well styled and carefully tailored that they fit like a fine wool suit, yet give you all the comforts of a "feather-weight." You can't afford to "swelter" when such a small sum spent at Bond's gives you such comfort.

Cool Mohair Suits at $20

No "Sales" at Bond's

We've no "surplus stocks" to dispose of, because Bond's Clothes are made up only as needed. This means Bond's styles are always ahead—and our direct selling method cuts down costs to a point where we can, and do, save every buyer at least $10.
